FRESNO DECLARES HE VISITED RELATIVES OF HIS IN ILLINOIS

BOSTON AMERICAN

VOL. 9—No. 181. BOSTON, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1912. Registered in U. S. Patent Office PRICE ONE CENT.

The three-day mystery of "Fresno Dan's" absence from the Russell hearings at East Cambridge was cleared up today when "the little man in gray," as he is sometimes called, walked quietly into the courtroom with the explanation that he had been in the West and would have returned Monday, only a hundred-dollar check for which he had sent, failed to get to him in time.

"I did not intend to hide or run away," he said.

FRESNO DAN GETS BACK.

His account of his travels confirmed the telegram which the AMERICAN received from him from Chicago and the news received yesterday from Worcester by the AMERICAN.

"Fresno Dan" arrived at 10:30, a half hour after the hearing began. At recess he explained that he had been visiting relatives in Buda, Illinois.

He said he had not seen them for thirty years but "they knew me at once."

It was too hot in Buda, so Fresno Dan went to Chicago. This is the "quiet little man's" opinion of wicked Chicago:

"I don't know anybody in Chicago, but it is a pretty lively place and you can have a pretty good time there."

Stopped Over at Worcester.

On his homeward trip he stopped over at Worcester for a shave, to eat and to call on relatives. He arrived in Melrose last night and slept at "Brother William's" house.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

The trial of the famous will case opened at 10 a. m. today. Dolores Ison took the stand, and began the story of his boyhood recollections of Melrose. There was no

BOSTON MAY GET BIG LINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—If permission is denied for an extension of the piers of the Hamburg-American steamship line 100 feet into the North river at Hoboken, the American port of the transatlantic fleet of the line and its commercial headquarters in this country probably will be moved to Boston. J. P. Meyer, vice director of the line, made this statement, in effect, to the New York Harbor Line Board at a hearing in the United States Customs House.

The board is composed of Colonel W. M. Black, Colonel William T. Russell and Colonel S. W. Roessler of the United States Corps of Engineers.

Mr. Meyer was asked whether the Hamburg-American line could operate as profitable from another port as from New York. He replied that the line could operate just as profitably and that the only inconvenience would be that of moving.

He said it was imperative that the gigantic steamship Imperator, which will make her maiden voyage in April of next year, should be accommodated at a pier 100 feet longer than any of the present piers of the company at Hoboken.

In a petition to the Secretary of War Mr. Meyer had stated that if a pier of sufficient size could not be obtained in the port of New York, the Hamburg-American line would have to see what could be done to accommodate the Imperator elsewhere. He added that it was absolutely impossible to make fast the new vessel to any pier in the port of New York.

Representatives also were present from the North German Lloyd and the Holland-American lines, who have filed similar applications for pier extensions. Many pilots and steamship captains, testified in favor of a pier extension inside as it would no, in their opinion, cause congestion of shipping.

It is understood the Hamburg-American line has received offers of pier accommodation in Boston and New London.

After the adjournment Colonel Russell said that no decision would be announced in less than two weeks, and circumstances might arise which would delay the decision for a longer period.

FANS, COME TO THE RED SOX MASS MEETING

Plans for that great welcome home to the Red Sox will be laid at a great mass meeting to be held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the National Theatre. Every fan is invited. Plenty of music! Start the ball rolling for the big, enthusiastic welcome home to the victors! Mayor Fitzgerald will preside. Samuel J. Elder, the noted lawer and royal fan, will be among the distinguished speakers. Remember!

NATIONAL THEATRE

Sunday Afternoon, 3 O'Clock.

EVERYBODY COME!

OFFERS $1,500 TO $1,000 THAT GOVERNOR FOSS WILL BE RENOMINATED

Odds of $1,500 to $1,000 that Governor Foss will be renominated were offered at City Hall today by Edward P. Clark, a North End liquor dealer, who was the heaviest bettor in the Fitzgerald-Storrow fight. Yesterday he subceeded in placing $1,000 at even money on Governor Foss and today he tried to place two bets of similar size but could find no takers.

Because of his inability to place the money he offered odds of $1,500 to $1,000 and is willing to cover money in sums from $100 up at these odds.

TWO MORE FOR THE PILGRIMS

BATTING ORDER—1ST GAME.

PITTSBURG.	PILGRIMS.
Byrne, 3b.	Campbell, r.f.
Carey, l.f.	Devlin, 3b.
Mensor, c.f.	Sweeney, 2b.
Wagner, s.s.	Jackson, l.f.
J. Miller, 1b.	Titus, r.f.
Wilson, r.f.	Houser, 1b.
Butler, 2b.	Maranville, s.s.
Gibson, c.	Kling, c.
Cooper, p.	Hess, p.

Umpires—Finneran and Rigler. Attendance—1,500.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Sept. 19.—Another double attraction was furnished here today by the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Pilgrims. The second game yesterday had to be called at the end of the eighth because of darkness, making it necessary for the two teams to play another double bill today.

Kling's men showed plenty of pepper in the second game against the Smoky City players and it looked as though Fred Clarke's men were in for some trouble before they left town.

FIRST GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Pittsburgh—Byrne doubled to left. Carey fouled to Devlin. Mensor hit to the centre field, and by fast running made three bases, Byrne scoring. Wagner flied to Sweeney. Miller hit to Maranville, who threw high to first, and Miller was safe, while Mensor scored. Wilson flied to Jackson. TWO RUNS.

Pilgrims—Cooper, a left-hander, started off by fanning Campbell. Devlin was passed. He was forced at second by Sweeney, Butler to Wagner. Sweeney attempted to steal, but was an easy out, Gibson to Wagner. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Pittsburgh—Butler singled to left. Gibson sacrificed, Hess to Houser. Sweeney threw out Cooper, Butler taking third. Devlin and Houser disposed of Byrne. NO RUNS.

Pilgrims—Jackson fanned. Titus flied to Mensor. Houser popped to Wagner. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Pittsburgh—Carey hit to the centre field for three bases. Mensor hit sharply to Devlin who held Carey at third and threw Mensor out. Carey was also held at third while Maranville threw Wagner out. Carey tried to steal home and might have made it, but the pitched ball struck Miller and he walked to first, while Carey was sent back to third. Wilson singled to right, scoring Carey and sending Miller to third. As Wilson started for second Kling bluffed to throw, but threw to Devlin instead and Miller was caught off third. ONE RUN.

Pilgrims—Maranville fanned. Kling also struck out. Hess was thrown out by Cooper on a close decision. NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Pittsburgh—Sweeney threw out Butler. Gibson doubled against the left field fence. Cooper walked. Byrne flied to Jackson. Carey skied to Titus. NO RUNS.

Pilgrims—Campbell struck out again. Devlin singled to left. He took second on a passed ball. Devlin went to third on Sweeney's out, Wagner to Miller. Jackson fanned. NO RUNS.

HALE OUT FOR TAFT IN MAINE

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 19.—Colonel Frederick Hale, son of former U. S. Senator Eugene Hale, who has been the Roosevelt leader in Maine, today came out for Taft. The young colonel's departure from the ranks of Roosevelt caused great surprise all over the State.

Hale has had charge of all Roosevelt political machinery in this State and looked after the Colonel's recent tour of Maine. Colonel Hale declares Taft is a real Progressive and that all Republicans should stand together against the new party and its efforts, Hale says, to break up the Republican party.

Mr. Hale's Statement.

His statement is as follows:

I have asked Judge Philbrook, chairman of the State Committee, to call a meeting of that committee to see what can be done in the State in this campaign.

This meeting will be held within a short time. To my mind the only the fight can be conducted by the National Committee is through the State organization, down through the county, city and town organization.

My own position I stated clearly on my return from Chicago where I attended the National Convention. I said that I did not believe in a third party and that I should support the Republican ticket.

I have had no reason since then to change my mind. I am sorry to see the Republican party split up, but I believe the people of this State, Republicans and Progressives, will see the common enemy—the Democratic party—and that eventually they will get together again.

Differs with Many.

I consider myself as progressive as the members of the new party. I believed in the Spring when I supported Colonel Roosevelt for the Republican nomination for President that the Republican party needed to be more progressive, and I believe so still. But I differ with many in that I believe that this change can best be wrought through the Republican party itself.

In the September fight the united Republican party in this State showed what it could do. I did everything I could for the success of the State ticket. In company with Chairman Philbrook of the State Committee I went to New York and had a conference with Chairman Hilles of the National Committee. As a result we were given substantial assistance for the State campaign. My personal contribution to the campaign was $500, and this I gave to the City Committee of Portland. My original idea was to give this to the State Committee, but with the consent of the State chairman I contributed it directly to the City Committee of Portland, which was, I believe, in need of money at the time. I speak of this as I wish to explain why my name will not appear on the list of contributors to the State Committee.

I have been in frequent conferences with Chairman Hilles of the National Committee and Chairman Philbrook of the State Committee throughout the campaign.

SECRET INDICTMENTS BY FEDERAL JURY

Nine secret indictments were returned today by the Federal Grand Jury. It is not known who the persons are or what the indictments charge. Eighteen indictments and three no bills were returned by the Grand Jury before Judge Morton. No public report was made on the contract labor cases. William Rade, John Zwicker and James E. Fox were indicted charged with assault on George B. Tinkham, a customs officer. Four Chinamen were indicted charged with manufacturing opium in Noer Benford. Frank H. Stone, a clerk in the Arlington Postoffice, was charged with embezzlement and larceny.

QUARANTINE HAWAII FRUITS AND SEEDS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Acting Secretary of Agriculture Hays today signed an order placing a quarantine upon nearly all tropical fruits, vegetables and seeds grown in Hawaii. This is done to prevent the importation of the Mediterranean fruit fly with which the Hawaiian products are infected. The order is effective immediately.

TRAINOR HELD IN $10,000 BAIL

John H. Trainor, of No. 9 Harvard street, Charlestown, was held for the Grand Jury in $10,000 today by Judge Bolster in the Municipal Court on the charge of attempting to kill Miss Gertrude M. Jordan, who, it was said, had jilted him.

Miss Jordan was shot while in the packing room of a Tremont street building, where she was employed, on the afternoon of September 3. She is still in a dangerous condition at City Hospital.

Trainor who was represented by Attorney H. Lavne Brown, pleaded not guilty. Probable cause was found. Trainor was unable to furnish bonds and he was locked up.

On the stand John Thomas, foreman in the packing room where Miss Jordan was shot, said he had heard the young woman shriek.

"Oh, Mr. Thomas, I'm shot. I'm shot." He said Miss Jordan then began to scream and continued screaming as the second and third bullets were fired at her. He said three men had held Trainor until the police arrived.

On cross-examination Thomas said Trainor appeared calm and quiet throughout, and that the only words he heard Trainor say were, "Be easy," when he spoke to the policemen.

Captain Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation had the medical report read to the court. This showed Miss Jordan had been wounded in the abdomen and left shoulder. A bullet was found in her hair, but the scalp was uninjured.

Captain Armstrong said the young woman's condition was improved, but that the condition of the abdominal wound was such that it might still prove fatal.

SHERMAN WILL NOT TAKE STUMP FOR TAFT

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19.—Vice President Sherman said at Grove Beach, where he has gone because of overwork, that he had been ordered by his physician to make no speeches during the present campaign and that he had decided to do as he was told. Four years ago he made nearly 500 speeches for Taft.

WILEY SAYS MEN ARE BEST AFTER SIXTY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Welcoming the American Public Health Association to Washington, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley said the National Capital was a model city—to die in. Dr. Wiley maintained that men and women attain their highest efficiency after the age of sixty.

LINEMAN DIES AT TOUCH OF WIRE

John Leahney of North Leominster, lineman for the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, was electrocuted when repairing wires at Washington and Common streets, in Walpole, today. Leahney's right wrist hit a high power wire. He got 2,500 volts and fell across the wire. When lowered he was dead.

TRUE AND INSIDE STORY OF HOW THE STREET CAR STRIKE WAS REALLY SETTLED TOLD FOR FIRST TIME IN SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

DAKOTA DAN ON STAND TELLS OF HIS RETURN TO MELROSE

At 10:30 the little man in gray walked into the court room, and, smiling in his quizzical way, stood in the doorway and looked around for a seat. There was none at the lawyers' table near the master's bench and the witness stand.

Then the crowd in the court room caught sight of Fresno Dan. Nearly everybody stood up to look at the man who has caused all the mystery talk of the last few days. He kept on smiling. He picked out a seat, walked through the aisles, and sat down among the spectators.

The excitement died down. The lawyers, who had been looking at the missing Fresno, resumed their work, and Dakota Dan began again his story.

Mr. Nason asked Dakota Dan if he could recall any unusual occurrence at the Russell house between the time he was taken to see Professor Grady and the time sided. He took the 8.55 train from the North Station to Melrose, and slept in the Russell house.

"How long was your father ill?" continued Mr. Nason.

"He was all right the next day. When a doctor called I didn't see any," replied Dakota Dan.

In response to a question by Mr. Nason, Dakota Dan told something about his first visit to Melrose after his return from the West.

"The first man I saw," said Dakota Dan, "was Mr. Bean. They couldn't let me into the house and I thought I would go to the fire house, as father was greatly interested in it. On the way, I met William Storey, who worked for us. I knew him at once. I went into the engine house and picked out the picture of my father. I met Mr. Spencer and he said: 'By gorry, you are a pretty lively corpse.'"

The witness was interrupted by Mr. Nason, who said the reply was not responsive. Scharton declared that the witness should be allowed to finish his reply according to the rules of evidence. Master Pevey decided to let the matter stand.

Fresno Dan left his seat in the rear of the room and walked over to the counsel table. He shook hands with Mr. Upton and Mr. Almy. William C. Russell sat at the table. He paid no attention to Dakota Dan.

As to the Writing School.

Mr. Nason questioned Dakota Dan exhaustively about his attendance at Comer's Business College. The witness said the school was on Washington street, near the Old State House and near Harrington's store. The Dakotan said that his father met a man on the street in Boston and that the man, presumably the head of the writing school, talked to his father about the school.

"I'd like to send him to it," the Dakotan testified his father said.

"Did you see Mr. Comer there?"

"I have forgotten all the names. I don't think I knew the names of any of them."

At the last trial this question was sprung on Dakota Dan: "Did you attend Comer's College?" "No," replied the Dakotan.

Later he corrected this, explaining he did not realize this referred to Comer's writing school. Mr. Nason dragged the witness all over the writing school ground today from his standpoint that Dakota Dan is a fraud and never attended the school.

The Dakotan testified that he did not attend the school much more regularly than he attended the public school.

"Some times I would stay in the school two or three hours," he said, "and then I would go out and walk about Boston. I had a pass on the Boston & Maine and I would go back to Melrose whenever I wanted to. Some days I wouldn't go to the college at all. Eddie Prouty might come along and whistle to me and we would go into the woods."

"Did you tell your father this?"

"No," replied the witness emphatically. "Where did you get the passbook on the railroad?"

"I bought it or father bought it."

Chief Inspector Patrick Hurley of Cambridge, dark, heavy-set, and with a look of determination on his smooth face, and his assistant, Inspector Michael Nolan, gray of hair and moustache, were in court today. Storey stood at the rear of the crowded courtroom and listened to Dakota's Dan's testimony.

"Who are you going to arrest?" I asked Chief Hurley.

"Nobody," he replied.

A short recess was taken at 11:30, when I had a chance to talk to Fresno Dan. I asked him where he had been.

"Well," replied Fresno Dan, "I have been out in the Middle West for a while. I went to meet some relatives in Buda, Illinois. One of the families is named Longnecker and the other family is named Almy. I haven't seen them for thirty years."

"Did they know you?" I asked.

"Yes," replied Fresno Dan, "they knew me at once."

And then he continued:

"I stayed at Buda a little while, but it was so hot and dry there that I thought I would go up to Chicago. I don't know anybody in Chicago, but it is a pretty lively place, and you can have a pretty good time there. I stopped at Grant's Hotel. I tried to get the Boston papers out there, to find out what was going on, but had a hard time finding any. I also went for a short visit at Minneapolis. I intended to be back in Melrose when the case was resumed on Monday, but was delayed because I did not get $100 that I had sent for in time to start. The check finally came to me at Buda, and I had it cashed there. I did not intend to hide or to run away. I got to Worcester yesterday afternoon, and stopped off there for a short time to call on some relatives. I was also very hungry, as there was no dining car on my train, and I needed a shave. My train should have got to Boston yesterday morning, but it was about nine hours late. I went out to Melrose last night and saw my brother William at the house. I slept there last night."

Fresno Dan's Travels.

Fresno Dan walked out of the courthouse and stood in front of the building for a short time at the recess. Scharton, attorney for Dakota Dan, stood on the steps gazing at the accepted co-heir of the Russell estate. Sitting on the edge of the stone steps was the Cambridge detectives, Hurley and Nolan. They, too, looked Fresno Dan over carefully.

"Whom are you going to arrest, Pat?" asked Scharton, addressing his remarks to Hurley.

"You, I guess," replied Hurley with a smile.

"I know that's what you would like to do," replied Scharton. "I'm talking business. I guess you know who will be arrested."

Hurley winked at Scharton.

W. C. Russell a Sphinx.

Mr Nason asked Dakota Dan to identify several specimens of writing—exhibits in the former case. One of these exhibits was a note supposed to have been written by Daniel Blake Russell. Dakota Dan would not swear that he did the writing.

"I wouldn't swear to any writing," said Dakota Dan. "I'm no handwriting expert."

The witness described in much detail and in a low, monotonous tone that reached most of the audience only as a rumble, how he made various letters of the alphabet when he wrote. While this was going on William C. Russell sat at his counsel's table, his head resting in his hands. He is a veritable sphinx.

Earlier in the day when I asked him politely whether Fresno Dan had returned or not—and he knew at the time that Fresno Dan had returned—he shot by me without giving any sort of a reply. But I understand I was no exception to his general rule regarding his demeanor in this respect.

Just to the left of William C. Russell sat Fresno Dan. He watched Dakota Dan on the witness stand closely, his face wrinkled in a sort of half-smile. In reality his Indian-like countenance is as much of a mask as are the grizzled whiskers of William C. Russell.

The drone of Dakota Dan had a soothing effect on the "Kentucky Colonel," the gray, bald, Dakota Dan supporter, who has been present every day at the trial. The Kentucky-like gentleman, who is tree, without doubt, from the one characteristic that is credited to the real Kentuckian, laid his head in the hollow of his hand and slumbered sweetly. On his face was the peace that comes to a man who believes that justice will always eventually prevail in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Fresno Dan is bronze of skin, but his ears would have been little red if he heard some of the comments made about him in the corridors of the courthouse at recess. Women were the most emphatic in their utterances.

Mr. Nason asked Dakota Dan whether various pieces of writing were done by him. He summed the whole matter up rather carefully in two ways:

"Mr. Nason, I don't want to swear to any handwriting. If I wrote a thing and it was out of my hand fifteen minutes I would not care to swear to it."

Later he made this observation:

"There are so many imitations, you know, like there were at the last trial."

YOUNG MORMONS FOR COLONEL, DIXON SAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Senator Joseph M. Dixon, campaign manager for Colonel Roosevelt, arriving in New York today from Chicago, declared: "The real fight in the West is between the Colonel and Wilson. President Taft is a joke in the West. He will have to fight it out with Debs." Of Utah he said: "The younger members of the Mormon Church are almost all Progressives. Nearly all the officers of the Progressive party in that State are young Mormons who absolutely declared their intention to be independent in politics."

FORCED TO RETURN ON CATTLE STEAMER

The freight and cattle steamer Michigan arrived today from Liverpool with seven passengers who were forced to come on a cattle boat because they could not book passage on any of the regular passenger lines. The rush of westward travel is so heavy that not a stateroom could be secured by the seven.

By Actual Count Hundreds More Lots in the Automatic Bargain Basement NOT Advertised Than Are Included in the Announcements

Filene's Automatic Bargain Basement

But here's the point—Many of these lots are so small they might be sold before the advertisement is published. Many lots are limited to a few sizes or a few colors. Often it is owing to this fact alone that the lot is offered at less than its regular price.

Make it a point to begin your shopping trip in the Automatic Bargain Basement.

It is easily reached through its direct entrance from Summer Street Tunnel Station (more than ever a convenience on rainy days), or through its direct entrances from Washington, Summer or Hawley Streets.

The Automatic Bargain Basement sells at bargain prices dependable wearing apparel for all the family. Jewelry, leather goods and toilet articles, too. In most cases the entire day's shopping can be accomplished here. A lunch counter and soda fountain add convenience to economy.

Nothing can stay here longer than five weeks. Nothing can stay longer than two weeks without being automatically reduced. In every case we must make FIRST PRICES low to accomplish quick selling.

Thus, it will be seen that the Automatic Price Reductions are really BARGAIN INSURANCE, not alone when they actually reduce prices, but when they force FIRST PRICES to be low by the possibility of future losses if goods do not sell.

Man Shot in Mamie Hightower's Home

Coleman Fiancee's Marriage Revealed

Girl Disappears After Wounding of Chicagoan in New York for Which He Takes the Blame.

Mamie Hightower, who promised to marry George W. Coleman, the Cambridge bank wrecker, and vowed to wait the dreary fifteen years of his sentence to wed him upon his release, has married another man.

This is the most remarkable development of the mysterious shooting in a New York apartment of Jose Courat, a Chicago civil engineer. Just as one was the central figure in the tragic Coleman case, Miss Hightower, now Mrs. Jesse Smith, is the central figure to this second mystery.

Courat was shot in a room in Mrs. Smith's apartment. The room, according to Mamie Hightower Smith, was occupied by Madeline Burke, an actress. The police have rigorously questioned Mrs. Hightower-Smith and her husband, and are seeking Miss Burke, in spite of the fact that Mr and Mrs. Smith and the victim unite declaring that Courat tried to kill himself.

George W. Coleman is serving his sentence in the Greenfield jail for the larceny of $180,000 from the National City Bank of Cambridge. Miss Hightower, for over a year after his incarceration, paid him monthly visits, coming from New York for the purpose. Her frequent letters cheered him in his cell.

First the visits ceased, then the letters. Coleman had only the girl's promise to await his release. Now this hope is blasted by the news that his former fiancee has married.

Girl Promised to Wait.

Here are the words with which, after Coleman's sentence, Miss Hightower declared her love, her faith and her devotion. It is on this promise that Coleman relied:

"I am still in love with George. When he gets out of prison we are to be married. He will come West, then, with me. We will make a new start, and in our love for each other forget these last heartbreaking weeks here.

"I shall go home within a short time. I shall study, and devote myself to the piano. Perhaps I can earn enough so to give us the start we will need.

"But always my heart will be in the East. I have found George W. Coleman, not the man the public now condemns, but just a boy with a good, big, generous heart. I love him. I will always be true to him. I will marry him when he is ready."

The first news of the shooting, which developed that Coleman's fiancee was remarried, came when Mrs. Smith ran screaming from her apartment, and shouted to two bolboys, who had come running at the sound of muffled shots:

"Get an ambulance! Quick! A man has just been shot in my apartment!"

The Girl Disappears.

The boys ran for a doctor. Detectives came. They questioned the woman. Her husband arrived and was also examined. Meanwhile, the wounded man had been taken to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were taken to the station. They declared Courat had attempted suicide. Courat himself told the same story.

"I am tired of life," he said.

And so Mr. and Mrs. Smith were released.

An examination of Miss Burke's room, in which Courat was shot, aroused the curiosity of one of the detectives. Two bullets had struck the wall—the third had hit Courat in the jaw. He lay upon the bed. Several feet away was a chiffonier, and upon it lay the revolver. Miss Burke had disappeared.

The detective began to ask himself questions. Gradually he formulated several queries. Now the police are asking:

If Jose Courat shot himself.

Why did Mrs. Smith cry, at the first alarm, "A man has been shot in my apartment?"

Why did Miss Burke, who was with Courat when the shooting occurred, slip away?

How could a man bent on suicide fire twice at himself and miss both times?

The Trip to California Under Special Care

"You feel like sorting out and tying together the memories of this trip and keeping them separate from all other trips." A woman recently said this after a pleasant experience on a Burlington Route "Personally Conducted" excursion party to California. She traveled alone, but met many agreeable people on the car, which was in charge of a special conductor. This good natured official was a well-informed gentleman who went all the way through with the party, looking after the little details of the trip. Thus a family was left in care of these parties can travel with perfect safety and freedom from annoyance. If you would like to know about the Burlington's comfortable and inexpensive personally conducted excursions, please write me a postal and I'll send you maps, booklets, pictures, etc., by return mail. Friday Three-Hour Sales

FOR THE SAKE OF A NAME Is not the only reason why we have maintained these Hour Sales for nearly ten consecutive years. One GOOD reason, however, is the fact that they bring crowds to this store every Friday. It is with the "crowds" that we do our business—the masses—all classes—the rich and the poor—the people—the father, the mother and the entire family. There is good reason for the crowds tomorrow, when the following goods are offered at lowest Hour Sale prices:

URGES PRESIDENT TO HELP BOOM STIMSON

BEVERLY, Sept. 19.—Fred C. Greiner, postmaster at Buffalo, and a firm believer that Secretary of War Stimson would be the strongest candidate for the Republicans to nominate for Governor of New York, breakfasted with the President at Farragut's today. He talked over the New York situation with the President. He wants the President to alter his policy of "hands off" and lend his influence to Stimson. The President goes to Chelsea tonight, where he will deliver an address at the exercises in connection with the dedication of the new federal building in that city.

Ends Saturday, Sept. 28

Don't judge this sale from a distance. I know it seems impossible that GEORGES CustomModel Clothes, that you know from experience to be a full year in advance of readymades in style, are now selling at $9.50 or $14.50, regardless of cost—but that's all the more reason why you should want to get close to the proposition and be certain about it. Remember, that 33 years of reputation stand back of this offer. I reserve nothing of a light and medium weight character now in the store. Everything from the newest Norfolk model to the most staple blue and black serges goes. Many garments included heavy enough for late Fall wear.

All Suits and Fall Overcoats up to $25 NOW $9.50

All $25 to $40 Suits and Fall Overcoats NOW $14.50

My Great Exposition Of New Autumn Styles
Ranging in Price from $12.50 to $40

It is the centre of attraction for the really smart dressers about town. I'm more than proud of my advance showing. It presents, as usual, styles, shapes, fabrics, colors and patterns that readymade stocks will not have until next year. That's the attraction at GEORGES. I want you to see the new double-breasted styles, the Americanized English two-three and four button soft roll sacks in club check velours and handsome wide wale worsteds. Also the new London Fall Overcoats either plain or belted backs, in variously colored Scotch Tweeds.

CANDY HELP WANTED

POLITICAL NEWS

John J. O'Hare, Democratic senatorial candidate in the district made up of Wards 18, 19 and 22, will make a whirlwind tour of the three wards the night before the primaries. He will be accompanied by a number of Democratic leaders. O'Hare has received plenty of assurance in the district. This makes his second try for the nomination.

The quarters of the Hendricks Club on Green street, Ward 8, are filled with voters these nights, all of whom are assisting their leader, Representative Martin M. Lomasney, to send out political literature.

The city ordinance has vanquished the local Bull Moosers. James R. Connolly run up against it when he planned to swing a big Roosevelt-Johnson banner from the headquarters at No. 70 Devonshire street, and has had to give up the plan.

Herbert Davis, uncle or District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, is a member of the Ward 17 Tammany Club. He is known to almost every voter in the district. His versatility of mind on all topics, particularly politics, impels him to be in great demand when questions affecting the nation, State and city are up for discussion in places where prominent men of the ward gather.

An innovation in campaign vehicles has been introduced by Representative James H. Brennan of Charlestown, who is out for the Democratic nomination in the Second Suffolk Senatorial District. Jimmy, the youngest member of the Legislature, is stumping the district in a heavy motor truck.

Wards 20 and 21, Roxbury, are the scenes of one of the most interesting political contests ever waged. Five candidates are in the field for the Democratic nomination for the Senate in the district, and each one is claiming victory. Friends of Representative "Jim" Eagan say his nomination is assured. Friends of the other candidates are just as enthusiastic over the chances of their men.

Representative Patrick R. Carr of Charlestown, who is out for a renomination, is on the firing line again, after having been confined to his home for several weeks by a serious illness. His campaign has been going on just the same, however, for a committee of young men of the district have been out nightly working up sentiment for him.

John J. Lordan, House candidate on the Democratic ticket in Ward 12, has been a resident of the South End ward thirty years, still lives in the house where he was born. His father lived in the ward eighty years before the candidate was born. Both have always been Democrats. Candidate Lordan advocates municipal ownership of all public utilities. He served the State for nine years in the Coast Artillery Corps, First Regiment.

Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic City Committee owns an automobile which he uses nightly in covering speakers from one hall to another in the gubernatorial campaign.

Joseph Walker concluded an auto tour of Essex County with addresses in Lawrence and Methuen, in the interest of his gubernatorial candidacy.

Former Alderman J. Frank O'Hare, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the new Twelfth District, will speak tonight at several rallies in Ward 17, the home of his opponent, at Clifton and Shirley streets, 8; Mount Pleasant avenue and Dudley street, 8:30; Hampden and Yeoman streets, 8:45, and Dearborn and Albany, 9.

"It is not what a man says, it is what he does that counts; it is not how he talks, but how he votes." Is the gist of a rejoinder issued by Representative James F. Cavanagh, manager of the Everett C. Benton campaign for Governor, in answer to a statement made by one of Candidate Walker's supporters that he (Cavanagh) "absolutely misrepresented Mr. Walker's attitude" on labor and corporation measures. "I have never said anything about Mr. Walker's attitude, but have given his votes on those measures," adds Cavanagh.

Joseph E. Cahill of East Boston, candidate for the Democratic nomination for senator in the First Suffolk District, received the following telegram from Bill Carrigan and Captain Charlie Wagner of the Red Sox, bearing the Cleveland date line. "We have won our fight. Hope you win yours."

Mayor Fitzgerald may yet have the joint debate with District Attorney Pelletier that the District Attorney has turned down after challenges from John R. Murphy and Daniel J. Kiley.

Congressman John W. Weeks is another Republican standpatter just waking up to the fact that he runs a chance of defeat in his own rock-ribbed district. The Roosevelt Progressives are out against him in force. The Progressives seek especially to defeat Republicans of prominence, preferring a Democrat to a reactionary.

Chairman Riley of the Democratic State Committee predicts a landslide for Governor Foss next Tuesday. "It's just like this," says the judge, "the people know what Foss has done and they know just what the Pelletier campaign means. Foss will sweep the State by at least three to one."

Washington A. Coles, the blind orator who made such a hit all over the State in the Hisgen campaign, is on the stump for William N. Crosby, candidate for one of the Democratic nominations for the House in Ward 14. Coles has lost none of his popularity with his audiences.

The Boston Bull Moosers intend that the negro vote will not be cast in Massachusetts against Colonel Roosevelt without a fight. Beginning at Springfield today prominent colored women from the middle States will tour Massachusetts for a week, organizing clubs of colored women for Roosevelt. They come to Boston Sunday next and remain over Monday.

CHICAGO CHEERS GREET WILSON

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Democratic candidate for President, spent ninety minutes in Chicago today. He was cheered by thousands as he rode from the station to the Karpen Building, where he was greeted by other thousands who crowded into Democratic headquarters for a handshaking bee. At 10:30 a. m. Mr. Wilson left for Detroit.

He refused to comment on Colonel Roosevelt's charge that the heads of the trusts were for Wilson.

Wilson said: "I shall not comment on that. You know I never comment on what other men say. I comment only on subjects."

More than a thousand persons were at the station. Among them were five hundred working girls from a nearby factory. At Detroit Governor Wilson is to meet Ty Cobb.

Speaking at Minneapolis, Minn., Governor Wilson made plain just what he proposes in the way of anti-trust legislation. Here is what he said about the Bull Moose leader:

"Some people seem to think that it is progressive to take the bit in your teeth and bolt, or to lay about you to demonstrate to yourself as if you were at a Donnybrook fair, taking a crack at every head that shows itself. They seem to think progressiveness is a matter of weight and speed.

"It matters not how fast you are traveling. Whether you are a Progressive depends on the direction in which you are going.

MAYOR IN RALLY, RAPS PELLETIER

Mayor Fitzgerald at a noonday rally for Governor Foss outside the Walworth Manufacturing plant in South Boston declared that the Democratic party would be swept out of existence if it followed the announced policy of District Attorney Pelletier turning all Republicans out of office regardless of efficiency. He said in part:

"Mr. Pelletier slightly on the platform calls attention to Governor Foss' failure to displace all the Republican office holders in the Commonwealth and to put Democrats in their places. Mr. Pelletier shows how amateurish he is in politics when he thinks the Governorship of Massachusetts can be won on such an issue as that. Even when Governor Foss was nominated by the Democrats two years ago he knew that he could win only through the getting of at least 25,000 Republican votes. What a suicidal policy he would pursue if he went before these voters and told them that it was his intention to displace Republicans and put Democrats in their places regardless of the efficiency of the public service. Certainly Mr. Pelletier did not expect Governor Foss, after he had gone before these men in every part of the State, promising an efficient administration, to go back on his word and displace efficient men who chanced to be Republicans simply because they were Republicans.

"Then again, Mr. Pelletier knows that Governor Foss has but one Democrat in the Governor's Council as against seven Republicans, and of course this body of men would not, if Governor Foss had the disposition, permit efficient public servants who were Republicans to be displaced by Democrats. What a woefully weak candidate Mr. Pelletier would be for the Democratic party this year to go out into the Republican strongholds on the platform that he would put out of office every Republican regardless of efficiency. How hopeless such a campaign would be from the start.

"How could we expect to carry the State for Governor Wilson on such a platform as that, and what would be the result of that kind of leadership, if it proved that Massachusetts was altogether essential to Governor Wilson's success, and we lost the State because of the spoils platform of Candidate Pelletier.

"Take the other side of the picture and make note of Governor Foss' achievements along the line of humanitarian effort and see whether his policy of the improvement of the interests of three million and a half people in Massachusetts for the benefit of the people rather than the putting in of a few office holders should be the determining factor in the caucuses on Tuesday next."

TAFTS WILL GO TO THE BROCKTON FAIR

BROCKTON, Sept. 19.—President Taft announced today that he would attend the Brockton Fair on October 3.

ROOSEVELT HITS BACK AT GOV. WILSON

TRINIDAD, Col., Sept. 19.—In a strong speech here today Colonel Roosevelt hammered back at Governor Woodrow Wilson for his attack upon the Progressive platforms at Sioux Falls in which the Governor charged that it played into the hands of the Steel and Harvester Trusts. The ex-President angrily asserted that the two trusts are supporting Mr. Wilson and that the Democratic and Republican platforms rather than that of the Progressives, cater to the crooked corporations. Mr. Wilson should be above misstating facts in order to bolster up his arguments, said the Colonel.

"Mr. Wilson has an entire right to defend his own platform if he feels bold to do so and an entire right to assail the Progressive platform, but he should confine himself to telling the facts as they are. In his speech he stated that the method now proposed by the Progressives to regulate the trusts was suggested by Messrs. Gary and Perkins before the committee of the House of Representatives and he suggested that it was done to save the United States Steel Corporation from the necessity of doing its business better than its competitors.

"Neither of these statements is in accordance with the facts and five minutes' inquiry on Mr. Wilson's part would have taught him that there was not one particle of foundation for the truth of what he was saying.

REPORT 5 LOST ON MOTOR BOAT

Five well-known Lawrence men are reported to have been killed in the explosion of a motor boat, in which they were sailing off Gloucester Lighthouse, during the storm of Sunday night. The men, all of whom live in Lawrence, are:

JAMES W. SANDS, forty, of the Sands Tailoring Company, Essex street.

JOSEPH GOFF, forty, a carriage driver.

DAVID DOBSON, billiard room clerk, Franklin House.

MILTON TOWNSEND, seventy-five, caretaker at Elks Home. A retired Civil War veteran.

Sands and Orroth are married. Word was received at their homes today that all were lost. The party left Lawrence in the thirty-eight-foot motor boat which was owned by Sands. When the party did not return by Tuesday morning, anxiety was felt by their families.

Information was sought regarding their whereabouts and it was reported at the respective homes that all were lost when the launch was blown up in the terrific storm. It is said that the launch was off Gloucester Lighthouse when the explosion came. No verification of the reported explosion could be secured today.

Crawford Ranges

Any iron worker can make a box with a fire in one end and call it a cooking stove.

It may in outward appearance impress you favorably—and—if you want a cooking stove merely to look at it may be satisfactory.

But—if you want a cooking stove that will cook your food perfectly, that banishes toil and trouble, that is so easy to manage and so sure in results that cooking becomes a joy—its name is Crawford.

The Single Damper (patented) regulates better than two dampers; the curved Cup-Joint flues heat the oven in every part alike; there is an Ash Hod instead of the clumsy old ash pan. These are not found in any other range.

Waldo's Aid in Police Graft Scandal

Mayor Gaynor's Friend, Hyde, Drawn into the Mixup and He Will Testify Today.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Former City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde is to be one of the star witnesses before the aldermanic investigating committee, whose hearings have already revealed the fact that small fortunes must be paid by men-

WIFE OF "LEFTY LOUIE"

This sketch of Mrs. Lillian Rosenzweig was drawn by Michelson from first photograph taken of the young wife of the gunman.

"steered" promotions on the force, and Winfield R. Sheehan, Commissioner Waldo's own private secretary, were made public.

Detective Daniel Kelleher gave sensational testiuony regarding a meeting between Norton and "Willie" Sheehan, in the apartment house in which Sheehan resided. He said he had traced Norton there after following him for six days.

Kelleher further testified that he had met Sheehan in a restaurant in Fifty-eighth street and Eighth avenue, and Sheehan had demanded to know what "Kelleher had on him." When Kelleher said he had friends with him Sheehan replied he "had nothing on him" and, waving his hand, produced a number of gang leaders and gamblers to look Kelleher over.

As a result of the developments, neither Sheehan nor Norton, the "bosses" are likely to be called as witnesses, on the ground that it might be unwise to confer immunity upon them.

Emory R. Buckner, counsel for the aldermanic committee, stated today that Hyde will be asked what information if any he has of the graft clearing house in the police department and the "bureau of promotion" where police officials could buy any number of stripes that their pocketbooks could stand.

Both Norton and Sheehan came originally from Buffalo and were friends before coming to this city.

Johnson was under orders to report to the committee today to continue his story begun yesterday but the session was held when he told how, being led by "superheated curiosity," he hired private detectives who trailed Norton to the apartments of Sheehan.

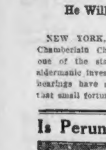
Mr. Buckner said he wanted further light as to why Johnson hired detectives, and with whom he consulted before taking this step. It was testified according to Captain Reith, who made the first advances, with an offer to have that official, then lieutenant, promoted to a captaincy if he would "come across" with $10,000.

Whether or not Hyde was concerned with Johnson in Reith's alleged attempt is another question upon which Buckner wants elucidation.

This same question is to be put to former Sheriff Nicholas Hayes, who was the first person to call Johnson's attention to the alleged headquarters for the collection of police graft in the building at No. 112 Broadway, according to Johnson's testimony. Norton's office is in the building at 115 Broadway.

Thomas Hassett, confidential secretary of State Engineer Rensel, who was mentioned in Reith's affidavit as having "been seen" in regard to the $10,000 promotion, came here from Albany demanding that he be heard in self-explanation.

Is Peruna a Laxative?



S. B. HARTMAN, M. D.

I am in receipt of a letter from a mechanic who is at the head of a prosperous household. Peruna has been used in his family for a good many years. He writes as follows:

"As you know, we have used Peruna in our home for a number of years. We find it a reliable household medicine for catarrhal conditions, coughs, colds and grip, and many other ailments to which the family is subject. But since the change in the formula we find that it is quite as useful to myself. My bowels are naturally very active. I cannot take a cathartic of any sort. It does me injury to do so. The old Peruna contained no cathartic ingredient and was therefore a very useful medicine to me. But I notice that the new Peruna has a slight laxative action, which almost makes it prohibitory for me to use. I was wondering if there was not some way in which I could obtain the old Peruna as you used to make it."

To this letter I made the following reply: "Yes, the new Peruna does contain a laxative element. You should therefore take the old Peruna (Ka-tar-no), which has no laxative quality. While prescribing the old Peruna I found it quite necessary frequently to prescribe the laxative Manalin in connection with it. Therefore Manalin was combined with Peruna, in order to meet those cases that require a laxative. But in case no laxative is required the objection to the new Peruna you speak of arises. Many of the people who used to take the old Peruna found difficulty in taking the new Peruna. To meet these cases I am having introduced into the old Peruna under the name of Ka-tar-no, and if you are anxious to get the old Peruna exactly as it used to be made you can do so." Peruna is for sale at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of Ka-TAR-NO, manufactured by the PERU-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

HARRY POLLOK AND WIFE ARRESTED IN ROSENTHAL CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Two more arrests were made in the Rosenthal case today following the discovery that they were preparing to leave the jurisdiction of the New York courts. Harry Pollok, a sporting promoter, and Mrs. Carrie Pollok were taken into custody as witnesses in the State's case against Lieutenant Becker. A. Becker, who is accused of having caused the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

The woman arrested is the wife of Pollok. After their arrest they were taken to the detective bureau attached to the district attorney's office and later arraigned before Justice Goff in the Supreme Court.

Besides Mrs. Pollok, the wife of "Lefty Louie" Rosenzweig is expected to be an important witness in the trial of the man charged with the murder of Rosenthal, her husband being one of the prisoners.

TROOPS OUT IN BELFAST RIOTS

BELFAST, Ire., Sept. 19.—After a night of constant rioting, during which there was much destruction of private property, troops finally dispersed the mobs today and took charge of the policing of the city.

About 100 persons were hurt. The rioting was the fiercest which has taken place since the first outbreak three days ago.

The outbreak began with a fight between Orangemen and a band of Home Rulers. Unionists turned out in great numbers. They marched through the residential section of the town smashing windows of Catholic houses and breaking into stores.

HOTEL MANAGER FACES COURT

Allen C. Jones, manager of the New American House, was arraigned before Chief Justice Bolster in the Municipal Court today for alleged violations of the 54 hour law in the employment of women and minors at his hotel.

After a preliminary hearing, trial of the case was set for one week from today, although Attorney Bond, counsel for Jones, stipulated that trial be deferred at least four days longer.

Thomas G. Connelly, counsel for the striking hotel workers, opposed the delay, claiming that the defendant had evaded service of the summons secured by the State Police for his appearance in court.

The strike called by the Hotel Workers' Union at the American House is still on, strike-breakers taking the union house places.

A similar condition also prevails at Young's, the Touraine and the Parker House, controlled by the J. R. Whipple Company, where the management offers to give the strikers certain hour and wage betterments, but refuses to deal with their union.

Edgar Pierce, of the J. R. Whipple Company, has notified the hotel strikers that he will not include the help at the other hotels in his offer to take back the strikers at the Parker House; that all negotiations with the Hotel Workers' Union are off and that the management will abide by the decision to fill the places of the strikers permanently.

The City Club house committee, Henry H. Fuller, chairman, conferred with Organizer Michel Dumas and Joseph A. Brown of the union regarding requests presented to the club this week. A compromise proposition was received on all matters, which the house committee will present to the club's executive board. The union will act on the report today.

At midnight there was a secret meeting at the union's headquarters, attended by about sixty colored men. After the meeting talk of a strike at another downtown hotel today was heard.

At a meeting of the strikers of the Touraine, Parker's and Young's the committee reported Mr. Pierce's answer and it was voted to wage a more vigorous campaign. The Parker House strikers met later and voted unanimously not to return to work unless the employers of all three hotels returned at the same time.

"Do your feet rule your mind? Think about it. Before I used TIZ, my feet were a constant source of fretting and worry; those pesky shoes were blamed. Corns, callouses and blisters ran riot and my entire existence was centred in feet! How ridiculous when you come to really think about it. But since using TIZ I have no aching feet, no puffy feet, no corns, my feet were only human feet, the same as your feet, anyone's feet."

TIZ is certainly the most wonderful remedy to draw out the acids and poisons that swell the feet and cause all foot troubles. Be sure you get TIZ—only TIZ.

WINNE FAMILY BUSY IN $40,000 CONTEST

It had to come.

At the supper table last night "Pa" Winne was as chatty and as companionable as the Sphinx.

For that matter, Ned Winne didn't have much to say, while Sir Thomas, the famous dramatic coach of our town, acted as if he might be understudying the Lone Fisherman in "Evangeline."

Altogether it was a dour meal, d'ye ken. The Winne family—Mr. and Mrs. John Winne and their children—who live in the Madison-Calvert apartments, are out to win the big prize of $10,000 in the Sunday AMERICAN'S $40,000 voting contest. The contest opens on Sunday next. The Winnes have been meeting with some success.

"Well," Ma Winne said, finally, "what is this, a Quaker meetin'? Isn't anybody going to say anything. Jimmy, boy, haven't you anything to say to mother?"

"Aw, Ma," said fifteen-year-old James, "I'm sure. I must a-gone four errands for old Dunenberry the grocer, after school, and when I asked him to take the Sunday AMERICAN for a few months, and boost our batting average for the $10,000 championship, he said he subscribed last week through his brother's son, in Maldon. If that ain't enough to make anybody sore—"

"I didn't do any too well myself," his father said, "the work in the office has piled up so that I haven't had a chance to do a thing on the contest for two whole days. In the meantime somebody in Worcester, or up in Bangor, Me., may be making a runaway race of it."

All in the Dumps.

"And they may be having your very own experience," said his wife. "I wouldn't be discouraged."

But the "dumps" seemed to be a family complaint.

Miss Alma had been too busy with her choir rehearsals. Katherine reported that the new teacher in French at the High is not so easy to please as her predecessor Katherine, therefore, had to give about twice the usual time to her studies. Ned owned up that he had been "loafing." Nobody did find out what the matter was with Tom.

"I believe it runs like that," said Aunt Anna.

Aunt Anna is Mrs. Martha Winne's twenty-three-year-old sister, quite the prettiest girl you ever saw in your life.

"Runs like what?" asked Alma Winne.

"O", said Miss Vying, "don't you know that some people hold that certain days are 'lucky' days, and certain other days unlucky days?"

"Bosh," said Ned, who plays ball.

"I am not advancing it as MY theory, Ned", said his young Aunt, "but it is a theory held by many. I have a few Certain friends of mine who go in for astrology—purely as amateurs, you know, and not for gain—will cast your horoscope for you and mark out certain days on which you must be particularly careful in business and in other things."

"In that case," Pa Winne said, "the past two days must have been Friday-the-Thirteenth for the whole Winne family."

Sorry for "Ma" Winne.

And everybody felt sorry, not so much for themselves as for Ma Winne, who put the family into the contest for the $10,000 in order that she may leave the city for a farm, out on the River Road, send James and Katherine to college, and start a bank account.

But "Ma" Winne is not easily discouraged.

"Why," she said, "I expected it."

"We're not quitting, Ma," said Ned.

"No, no, no?" said everybody.

"I know it," said Martha Winne, "I didn't know that. What I mean is that I expected these 'blue' days. That's what makes the contest interesting, aside from the race for the AMERICAN'S $10,000. Why, if we made a runaway race of it, everybody else would drop out. There would be no fun in a contest of that sort."

"We've got to take the good with the bad, and keep on working for the prize. I shouldn't be surprised if a thousand people, all over New England, finally send in Enrollment Ballots and start off with 1,000 votes to their credit.

"The more the better. If everybody rams in, for instance, a smaller number of votes would carry off the $10,000.

"As a matter of fact, many who start, meeting up with a day like this, will finally drop out. Let this little family determine now that, no matter how many bad days we meet up with, we stick to the last."

"You bet we will!" said Jimmy.

A Firm Resolve.

And "Sure!" "Certainly!" "I should say so!" said the others.

"And let us resolve," continued Mrs. Winne, "that when we DO have a bad day, it will always mean more determined and more aggressive work on the day following."

Again the responsive chorus.

"Sweetheart," said her husband, admiringly, "you really ought to have been a politician. I do believe you would have been Governor, at least."

"I think," said Mrs. Winne thoughtfully, "that I should prefer to have been blest as I have been."

The Contest Editor hasn't bothered much today, except to ask that it be made plain that the coupon to be printed in the daily paper will count for five votes, and the coupon in the Sunday paper for twenty-five votes. It isn't all subscription votes, be they, although subscriptions count for votes in wholesale numbers—1,500 for six months, 3,500 for twelve months, 7,000 for thirty-six months, and so on.

The contest begins in earnest with next Sunday. Coupons good for votes will commence with that day. In the meantime, cut out the enrollment ballot to be found on another page, write in your name and start in the contest with 1,000 votes to your credit.

Altogether the prizes number 1,501. The big prize is $10,000 in cash. There are five distinct prizes of $1,000 each.

INJURED MAN RUNS AWAY FROM DOCTORS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 19.—After having been dragged thirty feet today by a "Plaza Loop" car of the Portsmouth Electric Railway Company, and extricated from under the trunks through a trapdoor in the bottom of the car, Arthur Davis, twenty, was placed in an ambulance to be brought to the local hospital. To the surprise of the attendant, Davis, whose condition was regarded as critical, jumped out of the ambulance, and was caught only after an exciting chase. He was taken to the hospital.

POLICEMAN 'BROKEN' FOR 50 CENT BRIBE

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Patrolman Fred E. Brandt, a member of the police department since 1897, for taking a bribe of fifty cents has been stripped of his star. Brandt took fifty cents from a pedler under arrest and freed him.

ARABIC OFFICER WEDS HEIRESS

HARTFORD, Ct., Sept. 19.—Standing beneath an arch of hydrangea and cosmia, Miss Jeannette Goodwin, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Francis Goodwin of this city, was married to Lieutenant Harry T. Davison of England, the bride's father performing the ceremony.

Lieutenant Davison is second officer of the White Star line steamship Arabic, which arrived in Boston late yesterday, just in time to permit the officer to hurry to Hartford for his wedding. The bride, who is the only daughter of Rev. Dr. Goodwin, is one of the richest heiresses in Connecticut. Her father is a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan. The ceremony took place in the Goodwin mansion, No. 103 Woodland street, and the bride was given away by her brother, Rev. James Goodwin. Blair Cole of this city was maid of honor and Spencer Goodwin, brother of the bride, was best man.

Six of the bride's nieces, formed an aisle of ribbons and flowers, through which the bridal party passed.

The bride's gown was of Spanish lace with a court train, tulle veil. She wore orange blossoms. After a reception to the close friends and relatives was given and Lieutenant and Mrs. Davison left for Boston where they will embark next Tuesday on the Arabic to spend their honeymoon traveling abroad. Today's marriage crowns a romance begun eighteen months ago when Miss Goodwin was traveling on the Canopic to complete her musical education in Italy and when the rich girl and the steamship officer fell violently in love, at first occasioning considerable objection from the bride's family.

WALTHAM MAN, 84, KILLS SELF BY GAS

Veterious Y. Sullaway, eighty-four, was found dead in his room at the home of George I. Kelly, his son-in-law, No. 130 Weston street, Waltham, today. He had a gas tube, attached to an open gas jet, in his mouth. He left a note to Mr. Kelly, who discovered the body, thanking him for his kindness, and stating that he was old and sick, and felt that it would be best to die.

THANKFUL CHILDREN

They will appreciate it if you will give them a drink they like so much. It pleases them and helps to make their young bodies strong and well.

LOWNEY'S COCOA

is just as good for grown-ups. If you have but one hot drink at meals let it be Lowney's Cocoa for the children's sake and your own. Besides, it has a delicious tropical flavor unlike anything else in the cook book.

Boil it five minutes and get the good of it, but don't boil the milk

WOMAN FINDS CRETAN TOWN OF 950 B. C.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—In a report to the University of Pennsylvania Museum, Dr. Edith H. Hall of Connecticut, tells of the finding of the ruins of an ancient Minoan town on the eastern side of Crete. She says: "We found bronze tripods, swords and ornaments, and a number of Egyptian scarabs which fixed the date of this town at 950 B. C."

GIBSON'S WIFE DEFENDS HIM

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Sept. 19.—Mrs. Barton W. Gibson today broke her silence for the first time and defended her husband, who is in jail at Goshen, N. Y., charged with murdering Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo for her fortune. Mrs. Gibson is a former Fairhaven, Mass., girl.

"I know my husband is innocent of the terrible charges brought against him," she declared. "I know him to be one of the best and truest and most honorable men in the world. I have perfect faith in my boy. Where else should a wife be but at her husband's side at the time when he is in trouble. What are her love and loyalty worth if she doesn't cleave during good and evil report?"

Mrs. Gibson had just returned home from Goshen, where she visited her husband.

Mrs. Gibson feels so strongly that her husband is innocent that she has not allowed herself to give way to despair. She did not even weep as she recalled the circumstances of his present dangerous predicament.

"I know my husband is innocent," she repeated. "I trust him so implicitly that I have not even asked him to answer the ugly reports which have been published since this terrible affair separated us. I am confident that when the proper time comes he will be able to show that he has done only what was right."

"Everything will be made as clear as day and then the people will see how cruelly have maligned him. I remember having heard my husband speak of Countess Szabo, but I know absolutely nothing of his business affairs. He never spoke of his business relations nor of his clients at home, nor did I encourage him to do so. I believed that when a man leaves his office he wants to leave the cares of his work behind him and find comfort and recreation at home.

"My husband never cared to go out in the evening unless to go with me somewhere. He was perfectly happy at home with his books and his little girl upon his knee.

"We married when we were very young. I was eighteen. We have been married fourteen years and have always been very happy together."

WIDOW KEEPS UP STONE MONEY FIGHT

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 19.—The legal battle over the estate of Dr. Henry M. Stone of Newburyport, who was murdered in the town of Harvard, was fought today in the Superior Court.

For two days Mrs. Ella F. S. Stone, his third wife, who claims to be his legal widow, has been on the stand telling of her matrimonial experiences with the dentist and their financial dealings.

The suit is brought by Eugene W. Stone, a son by the first wife, to recover $2,200 which Mrs. Stone banked in Chelsea and drew out, as she testified, about three months after her husband was killed. She says Dr. Stone gave her the money.

All three of Stone's wives have appeared as witnesses.

"OSCAR" OF WALDORF HAS SILVER WEDDING

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Tschirky celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home, No. 113 Lexington avenue. That statement will interest comparatively few persons until it is published that Mr. Tschirky is "Oscar, manager of the Waldorf," and then thousands will say in surprise: "Why, I didn't know he had any name except Oscar." Each guest at the dinner received from Oscar a photograph of himself and his wife in a silver frame.

COUPLE WED IN OLD MANSION IN SALEM

Miss Mary Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Patterson, and George Augustus Upton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse F. Upton, coming of two old Salem families, were married last night in the old Colonial mansion, No. 74 Washington square, Salem, built for Clifford Crowninshield, an old Salem merchant prince, in 1805.

BREAKS LEG BY FALL IN SIDEWALK HOLE

Mrs. Hattie Bird, forty-eight, of No. 746 Dudley street, walked into an unfenced hole in the sidewalk in front of No. 760 Dudley street, and sustained a fractured leg and possible internal injuries. She was sent to the Homeopathic Hospital, where she is resting comfortably.

MAY ASK COURT FOR LUNACY COMMISSION, TO SAVE JORDAN

COUNSEL CONFER WITH SWIFT, IN FOSS' OFFICE, ON LAST DESPERATE CHANCE.

As result of a conference with Attorney as he only represented the Governor and General James M. Swift, representing Governor Foss today, counsel for Chester S. Jordan may decide on a final desperate effort to save their client by appealing to the Supreme Judicial Court to appoint a lunacy commission to examine the condemned murderer.

The Supreme Judicial Court has twice denied Jordan, once when his counsel appealed for a new trial on the ground of exceptions, again when he sought a rehearing because one of his jurors went insane.

Realizing that Governor Foss will not refer to the Executive Council the Jordan petition for commutation on the ground of insanity, counsel say they may try the Supreme Judicial Court again.

At the State House conference today were General Charles W. Bartlett, Harvey H. Pratt and Jeremiah S. Sullivan, representing Jordan, and Attorney-General Swift for the Governor.

The conference took place in the Governor's private office. It had been arranged for the attorneys to talk directly with the Governor, but His Excellency was called to Greenfield on account of an engagement to speak at Greenfield Fair. The Governor asked the Attorney-General to represent him at the conference.

There was a half-hour's earnest talk. The burden of the discussion was the possibility of the appointment of a lunacy commission of three to examine Jordan as to his sanity, in the hope that such a commission would find the murderer insane and so not a legal subject for execution.

At the end of the conference Attorney-General Swift declined to discuss it, saying it would be improper for him to talk.

General Bartlett declined to talk, but from another source it was learned that Attorney-General Swift told Jordan's attorneys that the Supreme Judicial Court has full power to appoint such a commission as they desire, and that application should be made to that tribunal rather than to the Governor and council.

It was understood that Jordan's counsel were to meet this afternoon or tomorrow to make final decision whether they will apply to the Supreme Judicial Court for such a commission in lunacy.

Jordan is in the death house at Charlestown State Prison, under sentence to be executed within the week beginning next Sunday.

If the same schedule is carried out with him as prevailed in the execution of Bertram G. Spencer, he will be put to death next Tuesday morning.

So there is little time left for any move in his behalf.

If the appeal to the Supreme Judicial Court is made and a commission in lunacy is appointed to examine the condemned, this appointment would, it is inferred, act as a stay of execution.

If Jordan's execution is again stayed this will be the second time Death has been thrust back by Jordan's counsel just when it was clutching at the murderer.

Jordan reached his thirty-third birthday today. His aged mother and father sent him a bouquet. The flowers were placed outside his cell where he could see them.

His father and mother and other members of his family planned to visit him today, their first visit since his removal to the death house.

The same prison rules that forbade Jordan to touch his birthday present today will prevent either his father or his mother from so much as touching his hand when they come to extend their last birthday greetings.

TRAGIC LIFE STORY OF CHESTER S. JORDAN

The opening chapter in this life of Chester S. Jordan related his early life, his vaudeville work, his marriage to "Irene Shannon," a burlesque actress, and their return to Boston in the Summer of 1906, when they rented a flat at No. 509A Medford street, Somerville. They quarreled often and Jordan acted oddly at times. In the last of August, 1908, Mrs. Jordan planned a visit to England, her native country. Tuesday evening, September 1, 1908, the Jordans returned to their flat in Somerville at 6:30 p.m. Mrs. Jordan was never seen alive after that.

CHAPTER II.

The Man With the Trunk.

On Thursday morning, September 3, Charles Linburg, a Somerville expressman, found in his order box a note directing him to call at No. 509A Medford street, Somerville, and take the trunk to the South Station. The note added that the door would be open, with no one at home, and that he would find the trunk ready. Linburg obeyed the directions, found the trunk and delivered it to the South Station baggage room.

When Linburg dragged the trunk downstairs in the Medford street house he noticed it was heavy.

The trunk was heavy—heavy with unsuspected horror.

That same morning Chester S. Jordan rented the second floor back room in the lodging house at No. 7 Hancock street, West End, kept by Mrs. Richard Haley. He paid two weeks' rent in advance.

Late that afternoon George W. Collins, a cab driver with a stand at the Hotel Essex, walked into the Joy street police station and said to Captain Peabody:

"You'd better go up to No. 7 Hancock street and see if a trunk a man had me take there their afternoon is his own."

Collins, the cabman, was finger on the hand of Fate. He had driven Jordan and the trunk from the South Station to the Metropolitan docks. When Jordan found there was no boat to New York that night he ordered the cabman to go to the Hancock street house.

The passenger was so nervous and the trunk was so heavy that the more the cabman pondered it, the less he liked it. When he delivered the man and trunk at Hancock street it was just a short drive to Joy street station, and Collins "tipped" the police.

Police Find the Body.

Within a half-hour one of the most ghastly murders that ever shocked Boston stood revealed to Sergeant Michael Crowley (now Lieutenant Crowley). In the trunk was a part of the dismembered body of the unfortunate burlesque actress, Mrs. Chester S. Jordan.

Under the fierce, insistent questions of the police the miserable prisoner told his name and address. Search of the Somerville house revealed more shocking details—the trunk's ghastly bones—the blood in the furnace—blood in the sink and bath tub.

Then Jordan gave to the police his confession, a statement which later appeared as evidence against him.

The confession in full was as follows:

Jordan's Confession.

I came from Indianapolis. I was born there twenty-nine years ago. When I met my wife she had already been married once to a man named Charles Eddy. She was thirty years old. Her maiden name was Honorah O'Reilly. I married her four years ago.

Right after we were married we went to Butte, Mont., to live. The climate did not agree with my wife, and we only stayed there a little while. Then we moved to Chicago.

We had both been on the stage and had made a specialty of vaudeville. When we got married we doubled up and secured a joint engagement. I did a sketch while my wife did a turn as a nurse and sang a few songs. We traveled around the country, but made our home in Chicago. Several times we played in Boston.

After about a year in Chicago—I guess it was a little over a year—we moved to Somerville, Mass., to live.

"Wife Insanely Jealous."

It was after we came to Somerville that we began to have trouble. My wife was insanely jealous of me. She told me I paid too much attention to other women. We quarrelled almost constantly. Why, the slightest notice I would pay to any woman would arouse my wife to an outburst. Even a nod sometimes start her. She assailed me on the slightest provocation.

This happened last Tuesday. I went home and about 7:30 o'clock—I guess that's just about when it happened—while my wife was getting supper, she began to accuse me of infidelity. I had only been in the house a little while. I denied the charge. She made it again. I retorted.

The quarrel got warm, and I don't remember every word that was said, except that it ran along this way:

All the time she was berating me she held a big butcher knife. She was walking back and forth between the stove and the ice chest. She got hotter all the time. I guess I did, too. Finally she walked to the refrigerator, got a piece of bacon and came back. At that time I got to the top of the stairs leading to the lower flat she called me a name that drove me mad.

"I Lost My Head."

I lost my head completely. I let my fist fly at her—I did not realize what I was doing. She must have fallen down stairs when I hit her. I lost my memory. I don't remember a thing that happened. Everything grew black. My mind was a blank.

Suddenly I awoke in my bed partly dressed. I don't know how I got there. I wasn't drunk. I had not had a drink. I cannot account for it. I knew I had forgot something, though. I knew there was a blank somewhere. I tried to clear my mind and think of the last few hours. But my memory was vague. My brain was cold. I couldn't collect my thoughts.

When I finally did get some sort of order in my brain, I knew it was daylight. It was Wednesday morning, the next day after my battle with my wife.

I got up out of bed, finished dressing in some way or another and started for the kitchen, where I had had my trouble.

My God, what a sight it was! I was stunned. There lay my wife on the floor. Her clothes lay near her on the floor. They were smeared with blood. There was some blood on the floor.

Then I knew she was dead—my wife was dead, there on the floor.

I looked around. Near her was a butcher knife—the one she had held in the kitchen. It was all smeared with blood.

I knelt on the floor. I don't know why, but I knelt. I looked at my wife again. I saw her throat was cut. It was cut in a complete circle clear to the bone.

Oh, I can't tell you how I felt, how I thought. I can't describe my feelings. I don't know what thoughts came to me. I was crazed.

Then I came to.

My wife was dead. I would be accused of murder. The evidence was damning. Not a word I could say would help me. What could I do? What would you do? I was in an awful predicament.

I couldn't help her. I couldn't bring her back to life. I was sure to be accused of her murder. So I cut up her body to get rid of the damning evidence.

How I hurried! I don't know how I did it. I can't tell you what I thought when I was doing it. First I cut off the head. It was all but, of when I found her. I used a hacksaw in cutting through the bone. Then I cut the arms off at the joints; then both legs at the knees; then just below the hips. Then I took out the thigh and hip bones. Why I did this I don't know.

Then I sawed the trunk of the body in two parts. I put the parts of the trunk in a set tub, also the flesh of the legs and then put the cover on.

I put the scalp in the firepot of the kitchen range and lit a wood fire there. Some of the rest I put in the firepot of the furnace in the cellar.

It had been my intention to start a stationery store in the Berkeley Building, on Dayton street. Some details of the business came to me, and I went out. I looked for William H. Manaki, a young man I was going to hire as clerk. All day long I looked after details of my business, and I remember them clearly.

He Packed Death Trunk.

Toward evening—I don't remember about what time it was—I again went home to my place in Somerville. I took the dismembered parts of the body from the tubs and cut them up smaller. Some of the body I put into the kitchen stove. Later I packed the different parts of the body that I had not otherwise disposed of in several packages and put them in the trunk. Then I put some of my wife's clothing in the trunk and covered up the remains. I locked the trunk.

Then I went to Bowman's drug store, in Magoun square, Somerville, and left a note for Perkins's express. The note said that the driver need not expect to see anybody home, but he would find the door open. The note told the expressman to take the trunk he would find there, as everything would be all right.

I went home, went to bed and slept in the house Wednesday night. I cooked my own breakfast in the morning. I had some multigatawny soup and cooked that. When I left the house the trunk had been taken, and I went to the South station, where I deposited it.

I can't account for how I was able to tell of this.

At the South station I found my trunk identified it and had it placed overnight door No. 1. I wanted it there so that there would not be too much handling. I went over to the Hotel Essex, found a hackman and had him go over to the station. There I helped him to lift the trunk upon the cab.

I planned to sail with the trunk for Paris on the steamer Lake and threw on the body away, one at a time the river without attracting any one.

I was driven to the Metropolitan, where the boat sails from. The driver piled down the curtains so nobody of me who was inside. I wanted to alone. At the dock they told me the change in plans whereby Yale would not sail because of an accident and the Harvard was substituted.

Then, for some reason, I got rattled. I did not know exactly what to do. I hadn't foreseen this. Another thing rattled me. I told the cabman not to drive onto the dock where the crowd was.

I didn't realize that I was acting suspiciously, but I was worried. I thought for a few moments, and then I ordered the cabman to drive me to the lodging house district in the West End. I told him to drive to No. 7 Hancock street, where I hired a room from the landlady, Mrs. Healy, and paid her. Then I got the trunk and helped the cabman carry it up. We carried it to the second floor down a hallway to a back room.

After the hackman had gone away I decided to leave, too. I hadn't made up my mind quite as to what I should do with the trunk, so I went out. I kept my mind busy with the details of my stationery business until 3 o'clock, when I went back to the room.

I was sitting on the trunk when suddenly the officers came in.

To Be Continued.

The First New Store Announcement of

Securite Gloves

And an interesting little Trans-Atlantic story about our planning for this Fall

Last Spring, when all our people were on tiptoe preparing for the new store, this word went to our glovers across the seas:

We want to improve Securite gloves. We know they are very good but we wish them to be the best beyond question. We are willing to pay more money for them but they must be better.

Back came the answer quick as a flash:

Sorry. We can take your money but we can't make Securite gloves better. No one can.

This from makers who know.

Do you wonder we feel rather proud of it all? And do you wonder we like to talk about Securite gloves?

The Securite glove family is large. No less than 166 styles for women and girls. Light and heavy weight kidskin, capeskin, mocha or lambskin. Almost every color you can name in any style.

Black		Pervenche	purple shades
White		Eveque
Tan
Acier	gray shades	Chasseur	green shades
Argent		Myrtle
Gris		Reseda
Mordore (brown)		Grenat
Rhone	blue shades	Cardinal
Marine		Champagne
Copenhagen		Mode
Mexique		Taupe

Prices vary with style:

Securite short gloves, $1.50 to $2.25

Securite long gloves, $2.25 to $6

Securite long kid gloves with extra large arms will be welcomed by many women. And three lengths of fingers mean more-than-usual chance of perfect fitting.

The new Filene glove store (main floor) is a model of convenience. A special shop for misses' and girls' gloves will be found on the fourth floor.

NOTICE: Beginning today the store will remain open until 5:30 o'clock P. M.

PLAN U. S. MOVE AGAINST PUTNAM

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Special Assistant Attorney-General Gregg had a conference with Assistant Attorney-General Fowler today relative to taking action against Judge Putnam, who has been criticised by the Department of Justice for his ruling that secret sessions should be held in taking depositions against the United Shoe Machinery Company.

Mr. Gregg said the right of appeal from Judge Putnam's decision had been denied by the court, but the department would act in another way.

He refused to state whether he would urge Attorney-General Wickersham to file an affidavit of prejudice to eliminate Putnam from the trial of the case.

The matter will be taken up with Mr. Wickersham when he returns to Washington.

Criticism of Judge Putnam in connection with the Shoe Machinery suit became public two weeks ago when Congressman George W. Norris of Nebraska began a fight to prevent the government's suit against the United Shoe from being heard behind closed doors. Congressman Norris at the time declared that he had found a law which would permit the removal of the case fro Judge Putnam's jurisdiction to that of another judge.

Norris further claimed that the Department of Justice at Washington possessed information on which it might file an "affidavit of prejudice" against Judge Putnam.

In a letter, Judge Putnam declared that there was no attempt to secure a secret trial, and that the examinations to be secret were all preliminary to a trial.

Driscoll of Springfield; secretary-treasurer, Martin F. Joyce, Boston; legislative committee, John J. Cunningham of Boston, Cornelius Carmody of Worcester, Henry Sterling of Boston; delegate to national convention of the A. F. of L., Emmet T. Wall, Brockton. The next State convention will be held in Fall River.

IRVING FISHER, SPEAKER AT BIG TRADE MEETING.

PROF. IRVING FISHER

FISHER TO TELL OF LIVING COST

Among the many important problems to be discussed before the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce in Boston next week, one of especial interest will be the report of Professor Irving Fisher, the political economist, who will discuss the topic, "The desirability of an international conference on prices and the high cost of living."

The reports will be made by experts, all of them prominent here and abroad. Professor Fisher is one of the best known, and since 1898 has been the professor of political economy at Yale. He was born in 1867, at Saugerties, N. Y., and studied at Yale, at Berlin and at Paris. In 1893 he married Miss Margaret Hazard of Providence. He was editor of the Yale Review from 1896 to 1910, was a member of the National Conservation Commission, is chairman of the committee of 100 advocating a national committee of health, and is a member and officer in a score of American and foreign organizations.

Professor Fisher is the author of numerous volumes, some of which have been translated into several languages.

Preston Gibson to Ban the Turkey Trot in Capital Society

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Preston Gibson, society leader and playwright, has come out against the turkey trot, the bunny hug wriggle, grizzly bear and the horse trot, which he has been credited with originating, and declares that he is going to use every means in his power to stamp these dances out of Washington society.

"The horse trot will not be adopted in Washington this season if I can prevent it," said Mr. Gibson tonight. "In my judgment there should be a revolution in the dancing world and the widely-advertised dances so prevalent recently should be shunned by all. They are most immodest and injurious to the minds of the young. They should get back to safe and sane methods in dancing.

"The horse trot differs quite widely from the bunny hug and turkey trot. You grasp your partner about the waist and hold her at slight distance and glide slowly at first, increasing the gait until a slight gallop is attained. Then you tighten your hold, draw your partner closer, and in a dreamy fashion ramble around and around in a trance."

The effect of Mr. Gibson's edict is that it will stop the affairs of the "dancing fifty" at the Playhouse Club. All last Winter this "dancing fifty," which included Miss Helen Taft, the Misses Meyer, Miss Margaret Draper, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Joseph Leiter and other society celebrities, studied and danced the new dances with enthusiasm and expertness.

ANCIENTS MEET RICHMOND BLUES

About sixty members of the National Lancers, together with a strong detachment from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, left Boston today for New Haven to assist in the entertainment and reception to the Richmond Blues, who are visiting different military organizations in the North. In New Haven the visitors will be the guests of the Chamber of Commerce.

GOV. BURKE WRITES TO L. R. SULLIVAN

Governor Burke of North Dakota, in a letter to Lewis R. Sullivan of No. 104 Hemenway, Dorchester, received today, complimenting him upon being the youngest grandfather in the State. "If every Democrat in the country had such a family as yours we wouldn't have any trouble in electing Democratic Presidents," says the Governor. Sullivan, although but thirty-six years old, is the father of nine children, seven of them living. At the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore Sullivan voted for the North Dakota executive for Vice-President.

INQUEST IN MRS. ROBERTS' DEATH

District Attorney Henry C. Attwill of Essex County today decided to hold an inquest to determine the manner and cause of death of Mrs. Estelle C. Roberts, the Gloucester woman whose body was found in the Manchester River, and who was thought to have been the victim of foul play. The State police and Chief of Police Converse of Manchester decided the woman met her death by accident.

Conflicting stories of the death mystery have been told District Attorney Attwill, so he decided on an inquest to ascertain definitely and finally just how Mrs. Roberts was killed. The inquest will probably be held early next week, and a stenographer from the office of the State Police will take sworn statements from the witnesses in the case.

NOLAN TRIES TO SMOOTH THINGS IN STATE DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19.—Harry E. Nolan, recently appointed secretary of the American legation at Panama, and acquitted by a New York court of a charge of abduction, called on Acting Secretary of State Wilson today, accompanied by his father, to find out whether his indiscretion in New York would cause the department to drop him from the diplomatic service.

He explained that he merely had helped Miss MacVicker, whom he had found nearly destitute, and that nothing had occurred which would, in his opinion, incapacitate him for service in the Panama legation.

Acting Secretary Wilson detailed to Nolan the results of the investigation of State Department officials assigned to the case in New York, and then said he would make a final decision at a later date. Officials today were outspoken in their opinion that the young man would be requested to leave the service.

500 BREWERS CHEER MAYOR

Some 500 delegates to the annual convention of the United States Brewers' Association met in the Hotel Copley-Plaza today under the the temporary chairmanship of James R. Nicholson, president of the Massachusetts Brewers' Association.

A speech of welcome made by Mayor Fitzgerald evoked enthusiasm. The Mayor's remarks about Boston and her place in history pleased the delegates so much that when he was leaving the hall, the company rose and greeted him with a round of cheers. The Mayor said in part:

"I welcome you to this prosperous and historic city. I hope you will enjoy every moment of your stay. We have the best roads for automobiles in all this country. I want you to visit our public library, the finest in the world, our Art Museum, our City Hospital and Public Gardens and chain of parks. You must travel along our beautiful North Shore, where the President of the United States likes to enjoy his Summers. Then go along the South Shore clear to the spot where the Pilgrim Fathers landed. Concord and Lexington are but a few miles away. All these will tell you that Boston is a grand old city. Its eyes I now hand to you with heartiest welcome."

The Mayor then spoke of his respect for the brewers' business as a legitimate occupation. He emphasized the need of vigilance against beastly and ill-considered legislation, citing the experience of the hotel keepers of Boston with the 11 o'clock law a few years ago.

For the Boston Chamber of Commerce, D. Fletcher Barber delivered an appropriate address.

National President Jacob Ruppert, Jr., of New York, was given a royal welcome when he rose to take charge of the meeting at the request of Temporary Chairman Nicholson.

BUTLER REFUSES TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Nicholas Murray Butler has refused to run for Governor. In a statement issued upon his return from Europe the president of Columbia University, chief framer of the Taft national platform, declared: "I am not only not a candidate, but could not under any circumstances accept a nomination for that or any other public office."

$1,130 FOR RECORD ALTITUDE FLIGHT

PARIS, Sept. 19.—According to measurements made by Aero Club officials M. Legagneux yesterday in his record high flight reached an altitude of 18,025 feet. Before attempting to break the record Legagneux made an agreement whereby he was to receive a franc for every meter of the flight. As he reached 5,500 meters he will receive 5,680 francs, ($1,136.)

DYNAMITE PROBERS CALL DETECTIVES

John and Max Sherman, proprietors of a Boston detective agency, were called before the Suffolk Grand Jury when investigation into the so-called Lawrence dynamite case was resumed today. A third witness called was G. S. Gordon, a contract labor agent for the Bureau of Immigration, who appeared before the Grand Jury some time ago.

PHONE UNION TO ACT ON GRIEVANCE

The general committee of Boston Telephone Operators' Union has prepared reports on a grievance, which will be presented tomorrow at the union's meeting in Wells Memorial building.

His flowers were his children; these he loved
With love that hearts less finely strung must fail
To understand. Like offspring of his being,
He cared for them, and thought a stranger's hand
Could work a blight, or nip them in the bud.
So carefully he nursed them night and day,
Unchanging in affection, save when once
He found a rarer bloom, more fragrant, too,
Yet of another flower family,
He loved it as his life. With jealous eye,
He watched it grow, and none dared touch it in His sight, so guarded was his vigil.

—"The Flower Fancier's Romance."

ARRAIGN WOODS FOR SHOOTING

gardener, by Albert H. Woods, a wealthy florist of Brookline. It is a story that is even more strange and entrancing than the fiction, mainly because it is true.

Goldrop was slain on the flower plots owned by Woods in Brookline. The latter, as he told the Brookline police, was lying in wait for the thief who had been stealing violets from his choicest beds. According to the facts which came to light today, both men had a love for rare and beautiful flowers which had become almost a mania. Love of the violet, particularly, had become the passion of their lives.

An Unusual Narrative.

Out of this passion grew the tragedy. It is a most unusual narrative. It is the story of an old man of sixty-six—Woods, wealthy and living in the most exclusive part of Brookline, with Moses Williams, the banker, and Sherman L. Whipple the lawyer, as his nearest neighbors—who had given over the best years of his life to developing and perfecting his flowers. Of late he had centred his attention—and his affection, his friends say—on his violets. It is said that none had finer or rarer violets than he.

Woods for years has been widely known among flower specialists for the fine varieties he grew. One was the Maria Louisa, another was the double California Princess violet, and still a third was the Campbell violet, all of them wondrously pretty and fragrant. They are jealously guarded, and enjoyed usually only by flower experts who exult in their beauty, but more in their rarity.

Lies in Wait for Thief.

There are gardens all around the Woods home in Brookline, and back of the house are two hothouses for special maturing of the tender plants. According to the story told by the police, Woods had been missing violets for some time. Last night he laid in wait to see the thief. More to scare the intruder, it is said, than to harm him, he fired his shotgun. Goldrop dropped in his tracks, dead. The violets had lured him to his death.

Woods was arrested and locked up at the Brookline police station on a charge of manslaughter. Although wealthy and numbering among his friends some of the best known people in Brookline, he did not secure bail until today, so he remained in his cell all night.

Woods Bailed in $5,000.

Today Woods was arraigned on the manslaughter charge. He was represented by Attorney Emery B. Gibbs. He waived examination and pleaded not guilty. The case was then continued until September 25. A few minutes later Woods was bailed by friends in $5,000.

Not long afterward an automobile drove up to the police station. The gates opened and closed. Inside, away from the cameras of the photographers, Woods entered the machine. The hood was lowered and the curtains drawn. Then he was driven quickly to his home in company with his lawyer and friends.

None of the members of the florist's family would talk. It was explained they had been advised by counsel to keep silent. After viewing the scene of the shooting, with Sergeant H. Allen Rutherford of the Brookline police, Medical Examiner Harry M. Cutts performed an autopsy on the body of Goldrop at the Lacy undertaking rooms, No. 18 Harvard street, Brookline.

Had Baskets With Him.

It was asserted by the police that Goldrop, who was said to have been in the employ of a wealthy Cambridge family, had two small baskets on his arms when he went to the Woods home. Goldrop's death must have been instantaneous, said the police, for the slugs of lead had torn the flesh from his neck and several shot penetrated the spinal cord.

The police said that Woods did not see until Goldrop began to run after he had been ordered to halt.

Gowns to Be Tighter and of Vivid Colors, Marie Tempest Says

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The carefully guarded secret as to what the Autumn fashions will be was betrayed by Marie Tempest today. The actress, who has been keeping the dressmakers busy, declares that the gowns worn this Fall will be skeletonized, mere sheaths for the female form divine—in a word, they will be tighter than ever.

"The garments as such has vanished, has become drapery," said Miss Tempest, whose newest photograph silhouettes her charming profile.

"Indeed, everything is draped; the dresses will be tighter under the draperies; there will be no foundations save those a woman's own true figure provides; everything will be transparencies. I do not know what we women are going to do with such unsubstantial clothing. Fur appears in every blessed thing for indoor and outdoor wear for afternoon and evening.

"In regard to colors, they are the most vivid and most violent that can be obtained."

WILL VOTE AT 102.

SPARTANSBURG, S. C., Sept. 19.—H. G. Meduck, 102 years old, of Varennes township, today registered for the November election.

EXAMINE CREW IN KILLING OF CAPTAIN

Melburn Cooke, acting captain of the schooner Margaret Thomas, and six of the crew were today examined by Assistant United States District Attorney Garland at the Federal building in connection with the killing of their captain, John W. Belano, at Port-au-Prince, Martinique, July 3, by the Spanish cook, Vincent Maris. The latter is now in jail in Martinique. The question to be considered by the federal authorities is whether Maris is to be extradited, or whether the testimony of the crew shall be taken and forwarded to Martinique. Captain Belano was an American citizen.

DEATH HOTEL OWNER NOW IN BANKRUPTCY

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Reinhold Busse, proprietor of the Hotel Boulevard, at Broadway and Sixty-seventh street, the scene of the death of Miss Julia Curran a few weeks ago, and of several other persons, filed a petition in the bankruptcy yesterday. He stated that he has done practically no business since the tragedy in his hotel.

Girl Sticks to Wheel and Stops Her Runaway Auto

BROCKTON, Sept. 19.—By pluckily sticking to the steering wheel of her skidding automobile, Miss Hazel Hall, a college girl of this city, saved herself and Miss Annie Case, her companion, from injury today. She brought her car to a stop after it had struck a telegraph pole and had side-stepped the corner framing of a shoe window. The window was shattered, but the machine was stopped instead of going through the window space.

Miss Hall is the daughter of E. C. Hall, a wealthy furniture wholesaler. She was graduated from Abbott Academy last June and enters Wellesley this month.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

Motor Truck vs. Horse—Alco Argument No. 10
It takes half the room to garage motor trucks
It takes twice the room to stable horses

ALCO
Motor Trucks

Rent—A Chance to Reduce it 50 Per Cent

Horses and horse equipment such as wagons, harness, feed bins, etc., require twice the stabling space as Alco motor trucks.

Moreover, horses must be stabled somewhere near where the day's work in the delivery of goods begins.

Rent thus is an important item in horse costs.

Alco motor trucks may be housed or garaged in the outlying portions of the city, for they do not tire in traveling a distance to begin the day's work. An Alco truck may travel five miles from garage to store or warehouse in the morning before delivery begins.

Rent in the outlying districts, as everyone knows, is much cheaper.

It is easily possible to cut down rent 50 per cent. by using Alco trucks.

Call Back Bay 5460 if you are interested and our Cost Bureau will get in touch with you.

LAKE DESCRIBES SECOND GAME OF SOX-GIANTS SERIES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

HARVARD ELEVEN STARTS IN FIRST SIGNAL PRACTICE

Time Is Limited for Fans to Contribute to Stahl Auto Fund

When the Red Sox won the American League pennant yesterday James R. McAleer President of the team, said:

It wasn't practically the same team that we had last year, with two important exceptions. One of them was at first base. There was a hole there that worried us until we introduced Jake Stahl to quit his business and come back to Boston. Jake filled that hole. He steadied the infield. He gave the team the balance they needed.

The boys kept coming. They felt good. They were all glad to be here and THEY LIKED THE FELLOW THEY WERE WORKING FOR. They were eager to do anything that Jake Stahl asked them to. That's all there was to it. They won the pennant.

For a new manager, Jake made less mistakes than any other man I have ever seen in a similar position in my thirty years of baseball. Jake had lots of baseball knowledge and he was just the man needed to lead the team.

I have heard of many good baseball teams spoiled by too many bosses. There was just one boss of this team, and everybody knew it all the time. That boss was Jake Stahl.

Have Helped Boston.

There could be no better testimonial to Jake Stahl as a manager of the first pennant winner Boston has had in years. It came from the President of the team which came into undisputed title to the 1913 championship today.

Boston fans are urged to be similarly loyal to "Big Jake" Stahl. Besides "putting Boston on the baseball map" again and giving thousands and thousands of fans the keenest sport they have had in years, Stahl and his men have done Boston thousands upon thousands of dollars of actual financial good in the advertising they have given the city through their feat of winning the pennant. Boston has many paying industries, built up by thousands of merchants, but no industry and no twenty-one men working together in Boston have done so much practical good for the city as Stahl and his ball players have this year.

Fans Are Loyal.

A. W. Barnard, vice-president of the Barnard Aluminum Company, has started a project for showing the Boston fans' appreciation of Stahl's glorious victory—an automobile to be bought by the fans and given to Jake. A fund for such a purpose has been opened through the columns of the AMERICAN and subscriptions are hereby invited.

The fund has already received a substantial start, by subscriptions ranging from ten cents up to $10 each. At the end of the week the list of subscribers will be published in the sporting section of the AMERICAN. The time is limited and all fans—men, women and children—"Big and little fans," are urged to make it a fund worth the city for which Jake Stahl and his team won the pennant.

Jake Stahl Auto Fund

Subscriptions to the Jake Stahl Automobile Fund should be addressed to the Sporting Editor of the Boston American, Nos. 86 and 82 Summer street, Boston.

Fans Eager to Welcome the Sox

Big Time for Pennant Winners

Every soul is falling in line. The reception to the champion Red Sox team on its return home next Monday ought to be worth remembering.

From all parts of the State suggestions as to the best way to greet the home coming American League victors are pouring into the AMERICAN office.

In order that the best of these suggestions may be incorporated into some definite plan for the big reception, the AMERICAN has arranged for a monster mass meeting at the National Theatre on next Sunday afternoon.

It's the biggest theatre in the city and the chances are that the biggest crowd that the auditorium has ever held will be on hand when Mayor Fitzgerald calls the gathering to order.

Every fan will be welcome. There is no charge. Every fan will have an opportunity to be heard on the best method of making the homecoming of the future world's champions an event long to be remembered.

Mayor to Preside.

Mayor Fitzgerald will preside. Street Commissioner Galvin, who is a dyed-in-the-wool fan, will be present to say a few words and many of the regular Fenway Park patrons will be on the platform.

It will not be all talking, however. There will be some good music and a genuine afternoon's fun for the rooters. Admission will be free and everybody is invited to take a hand.

No mail for the mass meeting. We will print more details tomorrow.

Suggestions for the action call for various ways in which Boston citizens can show their appreciation of the good work of Jake Stahl's team.

One fan suggests that the Boston National team be in the parade and take part in the parade and reception.

Another points out that it would be a grand idea to have all of the uniformed amateur teams take part in the procession.

Both suggestions seem to be very good and feasible. If there is any other fan who has original suggestions send them along and don't forget the meeting.

The business men are taking an interest in the plans for the reception. The Velie Motor Company has offered to furnish enough Velie cars to take the entire Red Sox squad from the station to wherever the reception or festivities are scheduled to occur. And so it goes. By next Sunday the interest in the home-coming of the Sox will be such that the who e town is liable to join in the parade.

President Taft plans to attend one of the games of the World's Series in Boston and his sympathies are now said to be with the Red Sox, although he was with Washington until all hope for them had fled.

Eager to Honor Sox.

Here are just a few of the comments upon the AMERICAN'S movement for the Red Sox reception:

By GEORGE V. BROWN,

It is a fine idea to give the Red Sox team a welcome home. It is only what a team that has won by good, manly sport deserves. I hope the city should wait till the baseball season is over, that is when the World's Series is over; then give them a proper celebration.

By GEORGE B. BILLINGS.

Fine! Great! The Red Sox have done more to put the city of Boston in the eyes of the athletic world than any other thing else. They should have a procession or some kind of a parade. I welcome them home and I know the team the city appreciates their work of the season. A big reception for them should be given after they win the World's Series, as they will

By FRED HARTFORD.

By all means have a celebration, now that the Red Sox have won the pennant. We should not wait till after the World's Series, but parade through the principal streets such as the celebration for Admiral Dewey in New York is the proper thing. Here are a few of the many ideas, typical of scores received.

Letters from Fans.

Sporting Editor AMERICAN:

I think your paper the manor and Mr. Frothingham some true sports manship and wish every advocate a democratic send off for the Red Sox when they come in. Let's hope you get it. Keep up the good work of which I know is capable, hoping the motto of the United States River again lost Saturday. I am one more signed L. C. Grinnell. I will do all I can to get the boys in the city and will write paper for plans and anything more.

CHESTER A. SMITH

Sporting Editor AMERICAN:

The AMERICAN'S suggestion in regard to the Red Sox receiving is a grand one. Would like to suggest that all fans in Mystic Valley meet the team at the station with a band of music and escort them up Park by way of Sullivan square, Main, Broadway and Bunker Hill to Bunker Hill monument. I also would suggest that the Mystic Valley band play the Red Sox home. Boston will show Stahl and the AMERICAN'S representative should tell the facts of this if successful trip. As many as possible should join in such. Boston men start on first car and all march around the field and parade back to Somerville. GEORGE T. FOSDICK,

Fred Lake's Story of 1909 Sox-Giants Series

Ex-Red Sox Manager Describes Second Battle

By FRED LAKE

THE Red Sox have always been a team of fighters. I have never known of a member of the team acknowledging defeat until the last man was declared out in the final inning. The Giants thought that we would be easy picking after they had defeated us in the opening game by a score of 4 to 2 but they failed to take into consideration that the Red Sox were composed of young, ambitious ball players who did not know the meaning of the word "quit."

My boys started after the Giants hammer and tongs in the second game, and when Ledgendre of battle had blown over we were on the long end of a 9 to 5 score. The Sox batted the offerings of McGraw's pitchers to hitherto unknown corners of the lot.

George Wiltse started in the box for New York, but he proved easy and was rich to the hill and unrut in the third inning when five consecutive players were jerked across the counting station. Then came the mighty "Rube" Marquard, for whom New York was reported to have paid $11 000.

Marquard did fairly well for three innings, but in the seventh inning the Red Sox started after him in earnest and hammered out three big runs, which virtually put the game in the strong box. Otis Crandall finished the fray and he pitched fairly well although we managed to swipe a run across the platter while he was officiating on the mound.

Eddie Cicotte was the man who pitched Boston to victory. "Smoke" was rushed so for fifteen hits, but was very effective in the pinches and managed to keep his team in front.

Speaker in Star Role.

Tris Speaker again played the star role. The Texan was at bat four times and he made three safe hits. "Spoke" gave a fine exhibition of speed and base running in the ninth inning. He started the fun by leading out an infield hit. He stole second without an assist except that he then pilfered third. This sterling act I believe scored a minute later on Harry Niles' sizzling two-base drive.

Before the series started, New York fans admitted that the Sox had some heavy hitters, but they claimed that my men did not know half as much "inside" baseball as McGraw's crew did. We made them sit up and take notice, however, in that second game.

The Giants prided themselves on the fact that no team was able to pull off a sacrifice play with a man on second and another on first. They had perfected a play which they termed the "Merkle-ity sacrifice killer."

They had a chance to use this play in the third inning. We had a man on first and a man on second, and there was no help down. The Giants' infield played in with Larry Doyle close to first and Tenney close to the base. The Giants had it "doped" out that Tenney would be able to get the ball, and get it over to third in time for the force out. Amby McConnell was at the bat, and you all know what a clever little fellow Amby was and still is. The diminutive second baseman picked one out to his liking and laid a perfect bunt down the third base line, which neither Tenney nor Devlin could field in time, in order to get the batter at first.

We broke up the Giants' pet play again in the seventh. This time McConnell was on second and Lord on first, while Speaker was at the bat. The New York players all thought that Tris would bunt, but he fooled them and stationed a wicked drive between Devlin and Bridwell. Thus we proved that we could play "inside" baseball just as good as we could uncork one of our famous Garrison finishes, which had previously been a game out of the fire during the regular season.

Giants Score First.

The Giants started the scoring in the opening chapter. With one down, Seymour beat out an infield hit to Jake Stahl. McCormick then walloped the ball far over Speaker's head for a triple, scoring Seymour. Fast fielding by "Spoke" was the only thing which prevented McCormick from making a home run.

Cicotte gave an exhibition of fine pitching in the third inning. Bridwell was the first man up and he singled. He went to third when Eddie threw wild in an effort to catch him napping off first. Tenney walked Cicotte then put on speed and forced Stahl to pop to McConnell and Wiltse to foul to Donohue. Doyle ended the session by taking three mighty swings.

We won the game in the third inning on some rattling good hitting combined with some poor work by the Giants. Cicotte was the first man to face Wiltse and he banged out a single. Tue Giant hurler was unable to locate the plate, for McConnel and the little fellow walked. Harry Lord laid down a perfect bunt and set the throw to first by some great sprinting. This caused Wiltse to go into the air and he passed Speaker. Cicotte scoring. Jake Stahl also might have got a pass if he had waited, but Mr. Jacob picked out out to his liking and sent the ball to deep left centre for a double, scoring McConnell. Lord and Speaker. Jake was left stranded at second as his team mates were unable to hit Wiltse any more.

Giants Come Back.

The Giants refused to throw up the sponge and came right back at us and scored two runs in their half of the third inning. Seymour opened with a single. McCormick, who had been hitting like a house afire, was unable to solve Cicotte's delivery and sent an easy fly to right, which Jack Thoney took care of, Tenney and Devlin livened things up, each of them singling. There were three on, and it was up to Bridwell, but the best Al could do was to hit weakly to Cicotte, who tossed Seymour out at the plate.

"Red Mar," Tenney started a small-sized riot among the bleachers when he singled, scoring Murray and Devlin. "Admiral" Schlei hit to Lord and beat Harry's throw by inches. And once again there were three men on and "Big Chief" Meyers, the fence buster, sat down run scatter and several other dozen fear-inspiring stallers, was at the bat. The fans thought that the Chief was going to break up the game, but to and behold, the heroic hitter struck out like the mighty Casey.

Sox Hammer Marquard.

The Red Sox started after "Rube" Marquard, who had succeeded Wiltse, with a vengeance in the seventh inning. Amby McConnell started the ball rolling by raping out a clean single. Lord laid down a perfect bunt, and once again he showed to the Giants infield by beating the throw to first.

HAMPSHIRE FAIR TO HAVE TRACK MEET

In connection with the Hampshire Fair at Amherst, this year, there will be a track meet held. Howard Drew is to run a special match race with the best sprinter the management can secure from New York. Don Young and Caldwell are looking for somebody to run them in a special race of 440 yards. The B. A. A. will probably send a man up to compete against them. The track meet is in charge of G. B. Bennett, a former track manager of Amherst College. There will be a one-hundred yard dash and a half and quarter-mile open handicap race for registered amateurs.

Williams Squad Put Through Signal Work

WILLIAMSTOWN, Sept. 19.—Signal practice in open formations was given greatest attention today by Coach Daly. Twenty-three men were in the field, a small squad which will only increase slowly, and the former Yale captain had little difficulty in using all his candidates.

The lineup, although frequently changed, was drilled carefully, and the work was rather slow. Chamberlain, one of the strongest substitute halfbacks on the 1911 team reported today, and Prindle, Lewis and Perry, all veterans, are expected to appear in uniform before the week is out.

It is difficult at this time to prophesy much regarding the season's success, but the main problem seems to be in the ball field.

DINGOLA IS SOLD FOR $1,500.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 19.—James Adams and J. B. Mitchell of Halifax today purchased the four-year-old stallion Dingola for $1,500. Lord Hastings, the Halifax stallion, was sold to H. W. Ryan of Pettcodiac, N. B., for $1,000.

WESTERN RACES PUT OVER.

JAKE STAHL GIVES TEAM CREDIT AND GLAD IT IS OVER

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—Manager Jake Stahl was never happier in his life than he is today as the leader of the pennant winning Red Sox team.

"Well, I am glad it is over and the race settled," said Stahl. "I have had the best work of every man on the team. This has told. Without it I should not be manager of a championship team today.

"The credit that comes to a team that has won the flag means the united effort of a bunch of players who are sincere in their endeavor."

Leader's Hardest Job Was Coaxing Stahl to Return

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—The hardest of Jim McAleer's work with the Boston Red Sox was before he had really acquired an interest in the club. That task was to prevail upon Stahl to return to baseball.

McAleer, in talking over the matter, said that he made no less than a dozen trips to Chicago to confer with Stahl before Jake finally consented to give up the banking business for the diamond.

Mr. McAleer met with absolutely no encouragement from anyone and especially Stahl. Jake insisted that he was through with baseball for all time.

Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, informed McAleer several times that Stahl would never play ball again.

Finally Jim went to Stahl and showed him wherein the Red Sox had a chance to run one, two, three in the pennant race, and explained to him that with a new plant at Boston there would be more money in it for him than by continuing at banking.

McAleer also explained to Jake that he was the "missing link," and that every player on the team wanted him to return.

McAleer had felt out the players during the 1911 campaign, and he says that in all his experience he never found a player who was so universally popular with his teammates as Stahl.

The Red Sox players admired Jake as much for his excellent qualities as a man as for his ability as a player.

When McAleer formed home upon Stahl that the clubs would be complete with Jake as manager and first baseman, and showed him the added inducement of increased finances, Jake fell for his line of talk and agreed to return to Boston as playing manager.

Now, well, now, Jake thinks it the wisest move he ever made. If there is one man happier over the outcome of the American League pennant fight than McAleer, he is Stahl.

"MY BEST TRADE WAS SWAPPING FROM SENATORS TO SOX"—McALEER

CLEVELAND, O., Sept 19. James R. McAleer, president of the Boston Red Sox, was in high spirits when he received the returns of the first Chicago-Philadelphia game yesterday, the Athletics losing.

"They called me the David Harum of baseball when I was a magnate," said President McAleer, "but I think my biggest and best trade was when I swapped a mauriral job of one club to become president of another. I didn't shine much as a manager, but as president I feel as if I should have a grade of 100 per cent."

McAleer Depends on Griffith and Mack to Help Sox

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—Jim McAleer, president and part owner of the Boston Red Sox and father of the All-Star series project, the move that put the Athletics on edge to defeat the Chicago Cubs in 1910 and the New York Giants in 1911, says that it is up to the Red Sox brother clubs to put them right for the forthcoming clash with the Giants.

McAleer hopes and believes that each and every club will put forth its best efforts to help condition the Red Sox for the fight, victory in which means continued prestige for the American League.

He says every manager owes it to himself, the Red Sox and the league to send his very best lineup, including his strongest pitching, against the Boston Speed Boys, especially in the last half dozen games of the season.

The Red Sox still have fifteen games to play, with one more Yankee game they can play if they care to do so. The chances are they will not exert themselves to any extent in the remaining two games with the Naps, and the three games with the Detroit Tigers. This may also be the case in the four or five games—as the case may be—that the Red Sox will play with the Highlanders in Boston, starting September 24.

But in the final two series of the season, three games at Washington, September 26 and 30 and October 1, and three games at Philadelphia October 3, 4 and 5, Manager Stahl's boys want Connie Mack and Clark Griffith to dish up their very best opposition.

They ask nothing more than to be pitted against Walter Johnson, Bobby Groom and Tom Hughes in Washington and Jack Coombs, Chief Bender and Eddie Plank in Philadelphia.

Of course, the Red Sox will not let up entirely against Cleveland, Detroit and New York, but it will be in the games with the Athletics and Nationals that they will try out the "stuff" they are already planning to work in the World Series.

Then, too, they want the pitchers named to work against them, as they know full well that the Giants can't possibly send the equal of Coombs, Bender, Plank and Johnson to the firing line in the big series.

Inasmuch as McAleer's All Stars of 1910 and 1911 did much to prime the Athletics for their setbacks which resulted in such glorious triumphs, it is up to Connie Mack and his players to pay their part of the debt by reciprocating in like form.

RED SOX VICTORY WAS WELL EARNED, DECLARES TAYLOR

"I certainly am tickled," said Vice-President John I. Taylor today.

I have always known as for [illegible] that they would have a [illegible] of good game fellows. We have been up there, fighting, every year.

There's a lot of luck in baseball? Well, it has come our way this time, and I must say that I am deeply gratified, for the sake of the players as well as for my own.

"They deserve to have the best we can give them, and I can honestly say that I, for my part, have never had a wish to give them anything but the best."

TAFT TO ROOT FOR RED SOX

President Taft has joined the Red Sox rooters, and during the coming world's series games here the nation's head will be present to cheer for Stahl and his band.

Day by day the President has watched the Red Sox keep up their strides toward the pennant, and today announcement was made at the executive offices that he would be "down among the fans" when the first game of the world's series is played in Boston.

Although no arrangements have been made for the President to attend all the games played in Boston, it is probable that he will do so if he can find time.

The President had hoped that the Washington American League team might win the pennant and expected to see at least one game on the Washington grounds in which his favorite figured.

With Washington out of the race, however, he turned his allegiance temporarily to the Red Sox, and his sympathies will be with them in the post-season series.

M'Aleer's Own Story of How the Red Sox Won "Most Consistent Team That Ever Played Ball"

(First story by the Red Sox president of how his team won the American League pennant, told exclusively to the Boston AMERICAN.)

By JAMES R. M'ALEER.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 19.—Well, we have won the pennant. We won it with the most consistent baseball team ever seen. We won because we had the best team that has ever played the national game.

I am confident that the boys will go ahead and win the World's Series. After that they will give Boston good baseball for four or five years to come without many changes in the ranks.

We have won this year, not because the other fellows have gone back, but because our boys have "found themselves." They have been coming. They became "nine." And now they have "arrived." They will stay for a long time to come.

The credit for winning this pennant is due to the boys themselves, and to none of the rest of us. The team is about the same as last year's with the exception that Jake Stahl is back in the game and "Heinie" Wagner "came back." With those two positions filled, and all the rest of the boys just reaching their stride, we simply had to win.

Before I give you my opinion of why the Red Sox are the best baseball team I have ever seen, I want to call your attention to two things.

First—this team has never been discussed. The Sox have played consistently from start to finish. Once they lost three games in a row, but otherwise were never beaten more than two games in succession.

Second—There is not a weak spot on the team. Every one of the Sox has "come through." The team has been consistent all the time and all the way through.

The Red Sox has beaten all comers alike. They defeated the Athletics just as they did the others. When the pinch came they were always there.

When Wagner "Came Through."

Let's go back to the start. When I came here last Winter I found about the same team as we have now, with two exceptions. I knew—we all knew—that we had one of the best teams in the league. All we needed were a first baseman and a shortstop. Jake Stahl filled the first bill. I figured that our only problem was "Heinie" Wagner—if "Heinie" came back we couldn't finish any worse than second. And "Heinie" came back, just as we hoped he would.

That completed our baseball team.

When we opened the season none of these boys was up to speed. We only had about one week of good weather at Hot Springs. At that, the boys looked like a good ball team when we left there.

But these boys had it in them, and began to hit their stride early. When Wagner and Stahl showed that they were in shape, we were there. With all of the other boys had the goods, and they naturally improved this year.

Speaker was always a great ball player. But see how he has improved this year! Lewis is much better than he was last year. Gardner was all right at second base. But look at him now at third! Is there any better?

Talk about weak spots! There is not one on the team. Some used to say that Yerkes was "the weak man." Did you ever see anybody improved like Yerkes? No—there are no weak spots. You never hear that any more. Gardner and Yerkes have just "found themselves" and their right positions.

There's Hooper. One of the greatest all-fielders in the game. True, he has had an off year in batting. But they all have days like that now and then. Can you find any better right fielder than he is?

With Wagner and Stahl, there's your ball team. Where is there a weak place?

They are regular champions. When we needed Yerkes, he "came through" and won for us. When we needed Speaker, he "came through." When Gardner was needed, he "came through." They were all there when they were needed. There was no fluke about their winnings. They are consistent baseball players; that's all—champions all the way along and all the way through.

For a first year's experience as manager, Jake Stahl made fewer mistakes than any manager I have ever seen. Jake is bright and studious. He gave the infield just the steadiness it needed. He is the right man in the right place. Everybody on the team is pulling for him. One of the reasons why the boys won the pennant is that they all love Jake and they were always willing to work their heads off for him. They were always ready to do whatever he wanted them to do, and they always "came through" for him.

They All Worked for Jake.

Jake's discipline was splendid. But he did not have to fight for it. He got it as a matter of course, because the boys were glad to do what he asked.

Going back again—These fellows were the best baseball players ever collected. There were two big holes in the team. Jake Stahl filled one, and Wagner "came around." If you ask why they won the pennant, there's the answer.

If you want proof of how great they are, recall how they beat Alexander the Great. There were no flukes. They defeated clubs of the greatest reputation by sheer ball playing all the time, just like clockwork. Those games with the Athletics showed what they could do.

I want to say something about them as men.

They are the cleanest, most quiet and unostentatious bunch of ball players I have ever seen.

You never see them boasting about what they can do. They fight all the time, but they never have a chip on their shoulder. They simply go out there like a regular ordinary baseball team. You would have to know them as champions by their individual appearance and actions, either on or off the field. They go to the park with best ness written all over them, work earnestly all day, have finished their job, and then go home the same way.

They are not "fresh;" they are not "struck on themselves." You never saw another set of champions like them in baseball.

They say we had luck in not having many injuries. It was not luck. These fellows all took good care of themselves, were always in good condition, so that they were not hurt often and when they were they recovered quickly, as an athlete in good condition always does.

They took good care of themselves both off and on the field. That's the story.

"Hughey" Jennings called them a "team of hand-shakers." Well, if that's what they are, that's the kind I always want to see.

The fact is, they are always friendly. They don't care about the other fellow. They are full of self-confidence. They knew they could beat the other fellow and they didn't need to bluff it through.

They are all game all the way through. You never saw one of them flinch. They are not afraid of any base runner in the world. You never saw them dodge spikes.

And they didn't need fight the umpires to win their games. Only once all season was one of them put out of the game. That is a record to be proud of.

Why, they are all just a bunch of kids. They are just getting in. They'll grow better all the time, and they have great prospects of giving Boston four or five years of the best baseball that was ever seen.

They just keep coming all the time. They all felt good. They liked the fellow they were working for. They are are all glad to play for Boston. That's all there is to it.

Now that we've discussed all the fielders, let's come to the batteries. Our catchers answered every question. Is there anything that they have done or not done that you can criticise?

Then there are our pitchers! We have had five most of the time. They have made a great hit all year. But they have had a great baseball team working behind them.

We had a successful second line, too. We were lucky that we did not have to call on them much, but when we did they "came through" for us. Bill and Engle did good service when it needed them.

We always kept a small organization. I do not believe in big ball clubs. They are likely to have discipline. When a man knows he must be depended upon, he is more likely to be "there."

Why They Beat the Others.

We had no trouble shaking off all of them except the Athletics and Senators.

The Athletics won last year because there was no team in the league like this year's Red Sox. They stood out last year because there was nobody to give them the fight that we have now.

Mack has a young club, too. He has the same men he had last year and he they ought to have improved Bender and Coombs, of course, are not a good, but Plank is better and Mack's aim was baptized. But he had more a give him an argument this year.

Washington came along and played a great game against everybody but the Athletics. Griffith got a lot of baseball out of the Senators. It is a question if some others could have gotten so much ball playing out of that team. I might have taken them, for instance, and not made so much with them.

When we started the season, I knew that we had a pretty good team. When we took the lead I felt that we would never be thrown out. We went into the lead June 10, my birthday, which I thought was a pretty good omen.

We really clinched the pennant, in my mind, when we beat the Athletics early in July. They had just beat Washington four games and were waiting for us. They were going to take us down the line. But, on their own grounds, we beat them four in six games, and they were a pretty sad lot of boys after that.

Football Officials to Vote on Rule Changes

On next Saturday evening the Central Board of Football Officials will meet at the Manhattan Hotel, New York, in accordance with a call issued by C. Lloyd Seiler, secretary.

The meeting will be attended by the members of the Central Board as well as by all the coaches, managers and Rules Committee, will preside and will put to a vote the changes proposed by the committee.

It is understood that the greatest amount of discussion will be over the proposed change from the four downs to the five downs in the game. Other points to be submitted are the doing away with the field-judge and the allowing of the forward pass to be made any distance beyond the line of scrimmage.

POSTPONED NEW YORK GAME WILL BE CANCELLED

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—President McAleer says that one of the Red Sox games postponed at New York will neither be played off in the metropolis, nor transferred to Boston. He states that it has been cancelled, which means the Red Sox have the pennant clinched, even should they lose all their games and Washington or Philadelphia win all of theirs.

BIG OFFER FOR JOHNSON.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Jack Johnson is considering an offer to go to Australia to fight Sam Langford and Sam McVey. W. J. Kelley of Australia and Tom Andrews, American representative of Hugh D. McIntosh, came here to offer the champion $50,000 for the fights. Johnson will meet them in about two weeks and decide the offer.

MACK PICKS RED SOX AS WINNERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—"I [illegible] believe the Boston Red Sox will win the world's championship of 1912, with as much ease as we captured it in 1910-11," said Connie Mack. "I do not think [illegible] will win the honors, but I sincerely hope and trust in their ability to do so.

"The Boston team is without question the best team in the American League circuit today and will, I hope prove the superiority over the National League. The fact I did not realize until we played Jake Stahl's team the last series in the Hub.

Hunting a Husband

No. 37—The Widow Finds Dr. Haynes a Real Help

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

BEATRICE awoke on Sunday morning with an unusual sense of importance of duty to be performed. She liked to rest on Sunday, but today she appreciated that in thirty six hours she must leave town, while before her lay what seemed to her the task of to be a week's work in the way of preparation for her departure.

Wearily she went in to breakfast, and sat silent throughout the meal. Then she began work half-hearted interest to survey the tasks before her. Rugs must be taken up, curtains taken down, trunks hauled up from the depths of the basement storeroom by the ill-aspiring janitor. Bric a brac must be put away in closets and silver must be packed preparatory to going to the bank tomorrow morning. These were but preliminaries, but they were tedious and tiresome. By 10 o'clock she once tidy apartment looked as though, to quote the maid's apt expression, "the devil's wife had had a fit in it."

Had Beatrice been in a more cheerful or philosophical frame of mind she would have comforted herself with the thought that, after all, her lot was much easier than is that of many housewives at this season of the year. To be sure, she had all that she could do to get away at the time set, but she was taking into the country only wearing apparel, bed linen and table linen.

For, in the complete little cottage to which she was going, there would be furniture for all the rooms, including china, glass and cooking utensils. There were rugs and carpets laid, while curtains and draperies were at windows and doors. The former owner's wife, who had been taken, as Helen Robbins had thought, providentially ill, was a good housekeeper and a dainty one, as well. So the cottage lacked nothing but linen.

Mixed Motives

Yet Beatrice, kneeling on the floor before a huge "Saratoga" trunk, was hot, dusty and out of temper as she packed her clothes for an outing which she declared mentally she did not desire. To plan to go was one thing; to do the work necessary for the July Summer flitting was quite another. She would have postponed the trip until a merciful change in the weather if she had dared to do so. She used the word "dared" in her thoughts and she meant it. Each time that she was tempted to defer her departure, Dr. Haynes' abrupt command recurred to her, and she resumed the disagreeable task.

Yes, he had told her to go, and she was going as he had ordered. She did not deceive herself with the pretense that anxiety for her child's health was her only motive in hurrying her departure. To be sure, she was uneasy about Jean, but she had something akin to dread of the brusque physician's displeasure. The paralogical effect of his harsh command had been great and the woman was, against her own inclinations, obeying him. Irritated him, she told herself, yet she was implicitly following his commands. She could not have explained why.

She was carrying a great armful of bed linen into the living room—where the trunks were ranged—when the door bell rang and a second later the man against whom she had launched so many mutterings within the last hour strode into the room.

"Dr. Haynes!" exclaimed Beatrice, astonished.

She deposited her burden upon a chair and put her hands hastily to her head to arrange her roughened hair. "I know I look a fright," she said apologetically, "but I've been working hard. I had to do it in order to carry out your instructions. Moreover, I was not expecting company."

Her frank and manifestly real confusion, but the man laughed good naturedly. "Bless your soul," he said, "I'm not company! I'm only the doctor, though I did not really intend to stop here this morning. But I began to think about our little patient and decided to see for myself how she is progressing. I wanted to know, also, if you were following my directions."

The Doctor Helps

"I am trying to get ready to go tomorrow afternoon," answered Beatrice coldly, "although I doubt if I can get my packing done today. It is a wearying and trying piece of work."

The man smiled good naturedly. "Oh, you'll get finished packing all right," he said with irritating optimism. "There comes in every job a sticking point at which one is ready to weep—or swear—in despair of ever getting through. And then, if you drive straight ahead at it, you suddenly find that you are almost done. Here, let me help you with that!"

He stepped forward and took hold of one end of a heavy counterpane Beatrice was struggling to fold. "There's no use in my standing here all the day idle," he went on, smiling genially. "I think I'm doing more good helping you people on this Sabbath day, when you are working to get a sick child to the country, than I would do by going to a church and listening to a sermon."

"What do you think about it, sweetheart?"

The question was addressed to Jean, who, propped among pillows on the living-room divan, had been gazing at him with adoring eyes.

The physician pinched the wan little cheek, then turned to assist the unresponsive widow with her packing.

"Not a word!" he cried boyishly as she began to protest. "I'm going to help you, and that's all there is about it. Finished with this trunk, aren't you? Then let's get it out of the way!"

He grasped the handles and the great box which had seemed to the woman as immovable as Gibraltar was dragged out into the hall.

It was now amazing how helpful this man could be and how his presence simplified the work. Beatrice found herself laughing with Jean, at his stories and his jokes, and the labor grew light in his presence. By noon the packing was done, with the exception of such articles as would be put into suit-cases tomorrow morning.

Veering Sentiment

"There!" exclaimed the physician triumphantly, as he put on the coat which, at Beatrice's suggestion, he had removed when he began work. "That packing wasn't such an awful job after all!"

"I am very much obliged to you," said Beatrice, gratefully. Her manner had thawed to warm friendship within the past hour. "You have done most of the work."

"Indeed, no!" he exclaimed. "It's been fun to me. I like to tackle hard propositions and subdue them. And this has been fun, so don't thank me. Besides, I'm afraid I was a bit rude when I was here the other day and I'm glad of a chance to make some amends. To tell the truth, I'd been up all the night before that day, and I was in a beastly humor."

"I never thought of your abrupt manner," replied the woman, meaningly.

"I'm glad," said the man. "Then perhaps I might test your kindly feeling and ask a favor of you?"

"Certainly you may!" replied Beatrice with a thrill of expectancy.

"Well"—he hesitated—"I'm going out to Pleasanton tomorrow to try my luck to spend the night, and I thought perhaps you might let me"—

"Stay?" interrupted Beatrice smilingly, as he paused for a moment.

"Well," with a glance at Jean, "I thought perhaps you might let me take the little princess with me. The trip on the train won't do her any good and the ride in the fresh air will. I'll take good care of her."

For a moment Beatrice's chagrin at his choice of a companion tempted her to refuse his request, but a glance at the child's eager face decided her to give her permission.

"If you think it's perfectly safe, I shall be glad to have her go," she said formally.

But though the man thanked her with seeming heartiness, the widow had an uncomfortable suspicion that his keen eyes had noticed her momentary hesitation, and that, perhaps, he suspected its cause.

Ten Ages of Beauty

No. 8.—The Gainsborough Girl

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer

"THIS face that has character, that is the ideal type of feminine beauty!" said the Man as he paused before Gainsborough's famous portrait of Mrs. Biddons, the celebrated English actress.

"It's all very well to have character, but you can have too much, especially in your face. Character makes one's mouth long," said the Woman, as she deftly tossed here with a loving touch. It was short.

However, the Man wouldn't be deterred.

"If woman would only model themselves to this wonderful type of beauty, think how a spoilt, how dignified, how magnificent they would be and how men would worship them!"

She even stabbed her potatoes as if they were bitter enemies and blood, instead of mealy food, would ooze out of them. It must have been very hard to live up to her. It's a great thing to have character to be great and powerful, to be a genius, in fact. But most women prefer that their husbands should occupy that position. No one hears of Mr. Siddons."

This seemed to strike the man very forcibly. He looked first at the beautiful portrait, then at the frail little woman beside him, with her big, appealing eyes, her curls and all the frilly furbelows of modern dress. Her mouth a little open, as if she had never had an idea in her life, and her innocent baby expression was as far removed from the Siddons clean-cut beauty as the two poles.

"Let's go and have lunch at the Cecil," he said, and tucked her under his arm protectingly.

"I bet it's an engagement," said one of the tourists who were being lectured by a museum guide and had now reached the Siddons portrait.

And it was.

What Could He Do?

"SPARE me a penny, sir, please?"

The clergyman stopped and looked around. He gave a start of surprise. Instead of an old or middle-aged waster he saw a youth of nineteen confronting him.

"My lad," he exclaimed, "I'm ashamed of you! A strong, healthy chap like you ought to be at work instead of begging. How came you to do it?"

"Well, sir," replied the youth, "it's like this: Twelve months ago I was fit and the doctor forbade me to do any work until he told me. Just after that he died. So what can I do?"

The clergyman is still puzzling over the problem.

EASY RECIPES FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY

HARMLESS FLESH-REDUCER—Fatty tissues reduce readily by using parrotta. Dissolve four ounces of parrotta in one and one-half pints hot water; take a tablespoonful before each meal. This harmless treatment takes away the fat without wrinkling the skin. In this manner a most satisfactory reduction in weight can be attained in a short time without resorting to harsh exercises or a restricted diet.

TO DISSOLVE THE HAIRS—Superfluous hairs are quickly removed from the skin with a single application of a delatone paste made by mixing enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface. Apply and let remain two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method is harmless and does not discolor the skin.

SCRAWNY NECKS OR FLAT CHESTS—The figure can be made plump and beautiful with the famous nuxurine treatment. This is prepared by dissolving 1½ cupfuls sugar in 1 pint water, then adding an ounce gallol. Take 2 teaspoonfuls before meals. This acts on starved tissues and a course of treatment thickens scrawniness and gives to a woman an attractive figure.

BLACKHEAD REMOVER—To destroy blackheads, freckles, enlarged, distended pores and similar complexion ills, use the following greaseless cream bleach. Stir together and let stand over night, one ounce of almonds, one half ounce cold water and two teaspoonfuls glycerine. The cream and softens the skin splendidly and is excellent for massaging to remove wrinkles. It freshens up the complexion and is a great aid to beauty.

ECONOMY IN SHAMPOOING—Any woman, no matter how abundant her hair, can now easily do her own shampooing in a few minutes time by using a simple, inexpensive shampoo made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Canthrox lathers freely and cleanses perfectly, taking out all dandruff and dust. The hair rinses easily, dries quickly and will be much more fluffy, soft and lustrous than with any other shampoo. It does not streak or bleach the hair like soap does.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 75—Warren's Wrathful Dignity is Upset by a Comic Song at the Ship Concert.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WHEN Helen awoke the next morning her first impulse was to call to Warren in the berth above. Then came the sickening realization that he was not there—and the memory of the wretched incident of the night before.

She glanced quickly at the couch and carpet under the porthole. Was that dark stain water? Had the waves washed in after all? Slipping out of bed, she felt the green velour couch covering. It was soaked through, and so was the carpet.

So Warren HAD been right in closing their ventilator. Because she was seasick she had insisted on having air, and had finally asked the stewardess to let her sleep in a vacant stateroom where she COULD have the window open. Warren, white with rage, had let her go.

She bitterly regretted it now. She had thought that he was merely obstinate in closing their ventilator, and that the waves would not come in. But it would have been better to endure the stifling heat than to have gone to another stateroom in this way.

The stewardess would undoubtedly speak of it, and it would be gossipped about the ship that she and her husband had quarrelled. Warren's attitude would bear this out, for he was furious and might hardly speak to her the rest of the trip. And they were not due until Saturday noon—almost three more days.

Although her dizzy nausea had passed away, and the angry sea had smoothed down to a tranquil, clear blue surface, Helen, as she sat at the edge of the berth, was tremendously unhappy.

The Stateroom Empty

Was Warren up yet? The sunlight was streaming in the portholes, but not yet it was still early. Had she better go back to their stateroom now and try to make things right? Was there anything she could say or do that WOULD make them right? When he was thoroughly angry, he was always so hard to appease.

Gathering up the few things she had brought with her, she threw on her dressing gown and hurried down the corridor to their stateroom. But Warren was not there. Yet it was only 7:30—he had evidently gotten out early on purpose.

Quickly she bathed and dressed and went down to the dining saloon. Warren was just finishing his breakfast. She slipped into her chair beside him with a murmured "Good morning," to which he replied without looking up.

A Mr. Walters who sat just across from them remarked politely that he was glad to see her down.

"Oh, yes, I feel very much better this morning," answered Helen. "How is Mrs. Walters? Isn't she coming to breakfast?"

"No, she isn't quite over it yet. We had it pretty rough yesterday. The captain says it's been the roughest Summer trip he can remember."

"Oh, Warren, that's interesting," exclaimed Helen, pitifully eager to draw him into the conversation and break his frowning silence. "No wonder I was ill."

"Oh, they always say every trip's the roughest. It's like the hottest or cold est day in the history of the weather bureau—we seem to get them every season."

Mr. Walters laughed, and he and Warren talked on. Once or twice Helen ventured a timid comment which Warren loftily ignored.

When he finished his breakfast, he left the table. Helen bent over her plate with flushed cheeks. He had never before left her sitting there alone. She hoped no one would notice. If he were going to ignore her like this, how could she get through the rest of the trip?

Alone on Deck

Helen was always keenly sensitive as to what people might think, especially when Warren's attitude towards her was concerned.

Although she had been too ill to eat anything yesterday, she had no heart for breakfast now. So when she finished the grapefruit she left the eggs untouched and went up on deck.

The steward had put out their steamer chairs, but Warren was not there nor was he walking about the deck. He was probably on the deck above, but as he was making it so plain that he wished to avoid her, she could not follow him.

The steward wrapped her up in one of the chairs. Several of the passengers stopped and spoke to her. Her illness of yesterday gave her an excuse for seeming languid and unresponsive. Her mind was on Warren and on how she could make things "right" between them.

The morning passed on and she did not see him. Surely he would come by before luncheon! He would not let her go down alone.

The luncheon horn blew and still he did not come. She would not go without him. But when almost everyone had gone down, she saw him coming towards her.

"Ready for luncheon?" he asked brusquely.

"Oh, yes, dear," as she threw off the steamer rug and got out of the chair. She laid a detaining hand on his arm and looked up imploringly. "Oh, Warren, I'm so sorry——" she began tremulously.

But he broke away with a curt "Want any luncheon or not?"

So he was too angry even to listen to her apologies. If he was so unrelenting she would not try to make further advances.

A silent, unhappy luncheon, and again she was alone in her steamer chair, with the long, lonely afternoon before her. Surely she was paying heavily.

Plainly the other passengers were noticing her desolation. Mr. Walters sat down beside her for a while and told her of the plans for the concert that night she had forgotten about the concert. And this was the evening!

At 5:30 she went down to dress for dinner, to be out of Warren's way in time for him to dress. She was just through when he entered. He opened his trunk and began to take out his dinner coat and fresh linen without even glancing toward her.

She felt there was nothing she could say now that would help, so taking a light wrap she went up to wait in the library.

When the second dinner gong had struck he came to the library door with a brief "Ready?" At least for appearance's sake he was keeping up the form of taking her down to meals.

The dinner was as silent, and for Helen as uncomfortable as had been the luncheon and breakfast.

Then the stewards cleared the tables, brought in a platform and placed it at the end of the long room, moved forward the piano, and the concert began. Small printed programs were passed around.

"Mrs. A. L. Russel, vocal selection," was the first number. And a stout lady of thirty-five sang "Annie Laurie" a little off key.

At any other time Warren would have whispered some scathing, humorous comments. He always kept Helen convulsed with his asides remarks on occasions like this, but now he maintained a stolid silence.

"Mr George W. Hastings, recitations," was the next. Mr. Hastings was an Englishman with the mistaken idea that he could recite.

The third was "John O'Connor, selections." As a big, florid Irishman in a tweed suit took the stand someone whispered, "He's from the second cabin."

But it did not matter where he was from, for after the first verse he "had" his audience. It was only an Irish song of a tipsy Irish workman, but his personality was inimitable. Even Warren's face relaxed into an appreciative grin.

The Silence Broken

At the end of the next verse Warren threw back his head and laughed without restraint. And when the song was finished he joined in the wild applause for another. This time it was the "complaint" of an Irish servant girl, and it was even more convulsive than the first.

"By George, he's great!" was Warren's fervid comment. "Why, he ought to be a headliner. He'd make a fortune in vaudeville."

"Yes, he's very good," murmured Helen.

"Good? Why, the man's a genius!"

And Helen knew that Warren's sullen silence was broken. There is nothing more upsetting to a husband's wrath than something absurdly funny. And Warren had not been proof against this Irishman's ludicrous drollery.

And now that he had once unbent, Helen felt he would not again resume his attitude of silent aloofness.

But curiously enough, Helen did not feel elated. Looking back, his whole attitude seemed childish and a little absurd. Surely there was nothing big or fine or manly about a man ignoring his wife for a whole day and only beginning to "speak" to her after his silence was forcefully upset by a comic song.

An hour ago there was nothing Helen would not have done to have broken down this barrier between them. Now it was unquestionably broken, for Warren commented freely on the rest of the concert. Yet Helen was not eagerly responsive.

Somehow, she herself was not just a little aloof. And, perhaps, it was for this reason that Warren seemed almost to exert himself to make amusing comments.

Helen was experiencing a variety of curious sensations. She was trying to analyze her feelings for Warren just then. And she was startled to find how cold impersonal and critical they were.

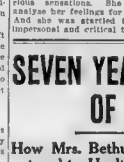
SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.



Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

Household Hints

Precipitated chalk is excellent for cleaning tarnished silver. Place a little in a saucer and add just enough liquid ammonia to moisten it. Rub this lightly into the silver, and the stains will quickly disappear. Then wash in hot suds, dry carefully, and polish with a clean chamois leather.

Picture frames are often disfigured by dirt marks. To prevent this sponge cover with onion water, made by pouring boiling water on to two or three large onions. Leave it for a few days till all the juice is extracted, and then apply the liquor to the frames.

When eggs are not required for immediate use, put the yolks in a basin and barely cover with cold water; place a plate on the basin to exclude the air, and stand in a dark, cool place until required for use.

To remove stain from the hands caused by peeling apples, immediately after peeling them, and before washing the hands, rub the stained parts well with the inside of the apple peel.

Flannel, when new, should be put into clean, cold water, using just a little good soap to remove the oil. Flannel or a treated and carefully washed thereafter will either shrink nor harden.

A little pipeclay dissolved in the water employed in washing household linen will be found to clean the dirtiest of clothes thoroughly and with a great saving of elbow and soap.

If a piece of sheeting or blanket is sewn tightly round the worn part of a sewing machine it saves the clothes from being marked or torn.

To cool jellies, etc., in a short time, take a handful of salt and the same of soda; put it in a bowl of water, and stand the jelly-mould in it.

Terrific.

"Seems to me it's awfully stupid here," remarked the transplanted dude. "Can't you rake up a little excitement?"

"Well, I might let you have your bill," suggested the hotel manager.

Praise This Remedy For Consumption

If the voluntarily written words of grateful people, living in all parts of the country, praising Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for the treatment of coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles, are to be believed, this medicine is certainly doing a vast amount of good for such sufferers. We state none but facts and give to you the names and words of praise of those who declare it benefited them—in many cases coupled with the writers' statements that it restored them to health. This is a sample taken from many:

St. Mary's Academy, O'Neill, Nebraska.

"Gentlemen: "About seven years ago, I was attacked with the dreaded disease, Tuberculosis. I coughed unceasingly, could not sleep nor eat, even could not speak out loud and could do no work. I had three hemorrhages, raised blood most of the time and suffered with night sweats, fever and chills. A specialist of Columbus, Ohio, prepared my case hopeless.

"Nearly five years ago, I heard of your Alterative and procured some at once with the result that I soon found myself restored to health. For the past four years I have been able to continue my teaching and though I have always had heavy school work, I am also able to perform much manual labor. I consider your medicine, if faithfully taken, a most excellent remedy for Consumption. Mother Superior permits this testimonial."

(Signed) SISTER MARIE,
Sisters of St. Francis.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain opium, cocaine or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

"As his brother—his only remaining relative, I have that right. Do you think that Dor—that Miss Scott can be trusted not to forestall that moment by any previous hint of what awaits him?"

"If she so promises. But will you exact this from her? It surely cannot be necessary for me to say that your presence will add infinitely to the difficulty of her task."

"Yet it is a duty I cannot shirk. I will consult the doctor about it. I will make him see that I both understand and shall insist upon my rights in this matter. But you may tell Miss Dorie that I will sit out of sight and that I shall not obtrude myself unless my name is brought up in an undesirable way."

The hand on the doorknob made a sudden movement.

"Mr. Brotherson, I can bear no more tonight. With your permission I will leave this question to be settled by others." And, with a repetition of his former bow, the bereaved father withdrew.

Orlando watched him till the door closed; then he, too, dropped his mask.

But it was on again when in a little while he passed through the sitting room on his way upstairs.

No other day in his whole life had been like this to the hardy inventor, for both his heart and his conscience had been awakened, and up to this hour he had not really known that he possessed either.

What He Is Making?

OTHER boxes addressed to O. Brotherson had been received at the station and carried to the mysterious shed in the woods; and now, with locked door and lifted top, the elder brother contemplated his stores and prepared himself for work.

He had been allowed a short interview with Oswald, and he had indulged himself in a few words with Doris. But he had left those memories behind with other and more serious matters. Nothing that could unnerve his hand or weaken his insight should enter this spot sacred to his great hope. Here genius reigned. Here he was himself wholly and without flaw—a Titan with his grasp on a mechanical idea by means of which he would soon rule the world.

Not so happy were the other characters in this drama. Oswald's thoughts, disturbed for a short time by the somewhat constrained interview he had held with his brother, had flown eastward again, in silent love and longing; while Doris, with a double dread now in her heart, went about her daily tasks, praying for strength to endure the horrors of this week, without betraying the anxieties secretly devouring her.

And she was only seventeen and quite alone in her trouble. She must bear it all unassisted and smile, which she did with heavenly sweetness, when the magic threshold was passed and she stood in her invalid's presence overshadowed though it ever was by the great Dread.

And Mr. Challoner? Let those endless walks of his through the woods and over the hills tell his story if they can; or his rapidly whitening hair and lagging step. He had been a strong man before his trouble, and had the stroke which laid him low been limited to one quick, sharp blow he might have risen above it after a while and been ready to encounter life again. But this long drawn out misery was proving too much for him. The sight of Brotherson, though they never really met, acted like acid upon a wound, and it was not till six days had passed and the dreaded Sunday was at hand that he slept with any sense of rest or went his way about the town without that halting at the corner which betrayed his perpetual apprehension of a most undesirable encounter.

The reason for the change will be apparent in the short conversation he held with a man he had come upon one evening in the small park just beyond the workmen's dwellings.

"You see I am here," was the stranger's low greeting.

"Thank God," was Mr. Challoner's reply, "I could not have faced tomorrow alone and I doubt if Miss Scott could have found the requisite courage. Does she know that you are here?"

"I stopped at her door."

"Was that safe?"

"I think so. Mr. Brotherson—the Brooklyn one—is up in his shed. He sleeps there now, I am told, and soundly, too, I've no doubt."

"What is he making?"

"What half the inventors on both sides of the water are engaged upon just now. A monoplane or a biplane, or some machine for carrying men through the air. I know, for I helped him with it. But you'll find that if he succeeds in this undertaking, and I believe he will, nothing short of fame awaits him. His invention has startling points. But I'm not going to give them away. I'll be true enough to him for that. As an inventor he has my sympathy; but——— Well, we will see what we shall see, tomorrow. You say that he is bound to be present when Miss Scott relates her tragic story. He won't be the only unseen listener. I've made my own arrangements with Miss Scott. It so feels the need of watching her and his brother Oswald, I fel the need of watching him."

"You take a burden of intolerable weight from my shoulders. Now I shall feel easier about that interview. But I should like to ask you this: Do you feel justified in this continued surveillance of a man who has so frequently, and with such evident sincerity, declared his innocence?"

"I do that. If he's as guiltless as he says he is, my watchfulness won't hurt him. If he's not, then, Mr. Challoner, I've but one duty; to match his strength by my patience. That man is the one mystery of the day, and mysteries call for solution. At least, that's the way a detective looks at it."

"May heaven help your efforts!"

"I shall need his assistance," was the dry rejoinder. Sweetwater was by no means blind to the difficulties awaiting him.

To be Continued Tomorrow.

CHILDREN HATE CASTOR OIL, UGH!

Delicious "Syrup of Figs" Best for Their Little Stomachs, Liver and Waste-Clogged Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the physic that mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. The day of harsh physic is over. We don't force the liver and 30 feet of bowels now; we coax them. We have no dreaded after effects. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's trouble is well founded. Their little stomachs and tender bowels are injured by them.

If your child is fretful, peevish, half sick, stomach sour, breath feverish and its little system full of cold; has diarrhoea, sore throat, stomach-ache; doesn't eat or rest well—remember—look at the tongue, if coated, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, then don't worry, because you surely will have a well, smiling child in a few hours.

Syrup of Figs, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics simply, cannot be harmful. It sweetens the stomach, makes the liver active and thoroughly cleanses the little one's waste-clogged bowels. In a few hours all sour bile, undigested fermenting food and constipated waste matter gently moves on and out of the system without griping or nausea.

Directions for children of all ages, also for grown-ups, plainly printed on the package.

By all means get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. Accept nothing else.

Women on Juries

Justice Surer with Feminine Counsel and Help

By DOROTHY DIX

AFTER a recent very flagrant miscarriage of justice in a murder trial in which a woman was the defendant, the trial judge expressed the opinion that it would be necessary to have women juries to try women criminals, because if a woman was young and good looking it was practically impossible to get men to convict her, no matter how strong the evidence was against her.

Judge Mary Bartelme, the first woman ever honored with a call to the bench in Illinois, who will sit as Associate Judge with Judge Merritt C. Pinckney in the Juvenile Court, takes the same view of the necessity for women jurors. She believes in mixed juries, and says:

"Women on juries will change lots of things for the better. You will find that lawyers must depend on the legitimate facts if they hope to impress mixed juries. Women will puncture a good many balloons that prove good for dizzy flights in the courts nowadays."

Undoubtedly both of these distinguished jurists are right. There is not only room for women in the jury box, but there is a crying need for them there. Our greatest two pieces of national humor have been that in a democracy one-half of the people had no voice in government, and that in a trial by jury, which guarantees to every one a trial by his peers, women were tried by men.

The Metamorphosis

And this latter joke is given a further point by the fact that men frankly admit that they don't understand women and are not up to the tricks and manners of even the smallest girl child.

It has been said that the strangest thing on earth is how twelve intelligent men can get together and act like one old woman. The next strange thing is how twelve hard-headed, practical business men dissolve into sentiments mush when they get in a jury box.

Apparently they don't weigh evidence, nor take probabilities into account, nor use any common sense in judging character and motives if they are trying a woman. All that the defense has to do is to talk plaintively about "home and mother," little children and angel wings and wronged innocence, and the jury will file solemnly out and bring in a verdict of "not guilty," no matter how clearly it has been proven that the murderess had committed a cold-blooded and deliberate crime.

Their theory is that perhaps she didn't do it, and if she did do it she probably had good reasons for doing it, and the other party ought to have been killed anyway, and, anyhow, they are not going to send a woman to the electric chair or to prison for life, especially if she is good looking.

The Loophole

An American jury dealing with a woman criminal is gallantry gone to seed, but it doesn't make for justice, and it does make it perfectly safe for any lady with golden hair and a willowy figure to go out and shoot any man against whom she gets peeved. Also it makes it profitable for other tender young creatures with blackmailing tendencies to bring breach of promise suits against wealthy men.

It would have a most restraining influence on both of these types of the woman criminal if they knew that they were to be tried before juries of women instead of juries of men. For a woman knows that while she may fool a man she can never deceive a sister woman. A woman jury will not care two raps whether a murderess is pretty or ugly, or be moved thereby. A woman jury will sense at the true value her tears, and know whether she is weeping for effect or because her heart is torn with grief. And a woman jury can tell by a thousand intangible signs, as no man jury ever can whether a woman witness is speaking the truth or not. There is a freemasonry of sex of which only the members know the grips and the countersigns.

Nor will women juries accept, as we do, the pathetic tale of how she has been deceived and wronged, that a middle-aged woman with a hard painted face gives as her justification for killing some man whom she has taken away from his wife. Neither will they feel called upon to shed many tears over the broken heart that asks money to heal it.

The woman will need a cause to be just who goes before a woman jury, but, on the other hand, there are matters involving as nice a judgment as that of Solomon in which women's sympathy and intuition will make for mercy as well as justice.

Certainly the cases that come up in the children's courts, in which the relation between parents and children and childish misdemeanors must be settled, should be tried before juries on which there are mothers, with a mother's knowledge of children, and a mother's heart to feel for other mothers.

Also, it is nothing but fair that all divorce cases, and cases that involve the relations of men and women, should be tried before mixed juries. No woman is capable of understanding men any more than a man is capable of understanding a woman, and it needs the combined wisdom of both to strike the just mean in such cases.

Another good reason why women should be on juries is that they have both time and inclination for it, whereas men seldom have either. It is notorious that men will go to any length short of perjury to evade jury duty, whereas women would like it.

In every community there are numbers of women of intelligence, of good sound judgment, of irreproachable character, who have ample leisure, and they might make a valuable contribution to the State by giving their services as jury women. Women's counsel and help are considered valuable everywhere else—why not in the court room?

Finally, the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and we have not only theories but facts to go upon. Women juries have been tried in several of the States where women have the franchise, and the judges speak with enthusiasm of the sane and fair verdicts they have returned.

GIRLS! GIRLS! SURELY TRY THIS! DOUBLE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

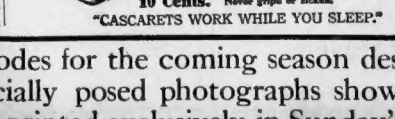
A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use of Danderine, when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS, HEADACHY, LIVER TORPID?—CASCARETS SURE

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, constipation, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight with Cascarets.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets sweeten and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and constipation poison from the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and make you feel bully and cheerful for months. Don't forget the children.

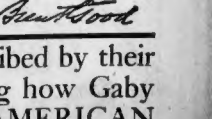


10 Cents. Never gripe or sicken.

"CASCARETS WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP."

The Liver is the Road to Health

If the liver is right the whole system is right. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will gently awaken your sluggish, clogged-up liver and cure constipation, upset stomach, biliousness, inactive bowels, loss of appetite, sick headache and dizziness. Purely vegetable. You need them.



Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

Votes should be sent in one bundle, with contestant's name and address and district number, and the total number of votes said to contained in package marked on the OUTSIDE of the WRAPPER.

THE SUBSCRIPTION PLAN—A vote credit will be allowed for subscriptions turned in for the Sunday AMERICAN (subscriptions to the daily AMERICAN will not be received).

You do not have to collect subscriptions in advance, but as an evidence of good faith each Sunday AMERICAN subscription turned in must be accompanied by a small cash GUARANTEE payment.

THE GUARANTEE payment is required to make the contest absolutely fair and equal to everyone, and as an evidence of good faith of the subscriber in giving the order and of the candidate in turning it in. The GUARANTEE PLAN will help all candidates greatly because only a SMALL AMOUNT in cash is required, and that simply as an evidence of good faith.

Length of Subscription.	Guarantee Required.	Vote Credit.
6 MONTHS	25 CENTS	1,500
12 MONTHS	50 CENTS	3,000
36 MONTHS	100 CENTS	7,500

This cash guarantee, in each case, will be deposited with the AMERICAN'S Auditing Department as an evidence of good faith on the part of both subscriber and contestant. Every person, who subscribes to the Sunday AMERICAN agrees to accept and pay for the paper regularly at the regular newsdealer's rate during the term subscribed for. The guarantee received in each case will not apply to the cost of the subscription until near the time of expiration. All subscribers must begin to pay for the paper regularly, beginning with the newsdealer's first delivery, with the understanding that the guarantee paid in each case will be deducted from the cost of the LATTER PART of the subscription in copies of the Sunday AMERICAN without charge TO THE AMOUNT of the guarantee (whatever it might be).

DELIVERY OF PAPERS—Each subscription blank will contain a blank space in which subscribers may write the name and address of any newsdealer or newsboy whom subscribers may prefer to have deliver the paper.

Just as soon as subscriptions are received at the Contest Department an order will be sent to the subscriber or newsboy or newsdealer named, giving instructions for immediate delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN for the term subscribed for. The newsdealer will then order delivery of the Sunday AMERICAN and notify the subscriber each week, except for the term at the LAST END of the subscription, covered by the guarantee paid, at which time he will deliver copies of the Sunday AMERICAN without charge to the value of the guarantee amount paid.

THE WINNERS—The one who receives the largest number of votes, irrespective of district, will be awarded the capital prize. The one who receives the largest number of votes in each district will be awarded the prizes as scheduled. In the event of total votes for any one prize or district being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The AMERICAN will not be responsible for any subscriptions sent in through the mails in any form other than postoffice money order, expressorder or certified check, addressed to AMERICAN Contest Department, P. O. Box 1047, Boston, Mass. Cash sent through the mails will be at the risk of the person sending it.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the AMERICAN.

No person can win more than one prize.

The AMERICAN reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise.

The Contest Editor will decide all disputed questions carefully and in good faith, and his decisions shall be final and conclusive.

$10,000 CASH FOR SOMEONE! WHY NOT YOU?

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE STREET, Sept. 19.—Midday—The Boston market had a strong tone today with trading rather quiet. While coppers were weak in early trading in New York, the majority of active Boston issues were higher here. During the first hour Wolverine made a substantial gain. Others to sell higher were North Butte, Bay Consolidated, Granby, U. S. Smelting and Amalgamated. Osceola showed the most loss. East Butte and Old Colony receded. Butte and Superior sold higher.

Early Strength in New York.

The New York market showed early strength. Prices ruled higher at the opening, with Canadian Pacific an exception. On the first transaction it declined from ⅜ to 1¼, being depressed in London by profit taking. There was a little reaction after the earliest trading and prices of some stocks receded. The market on the whole held firm during the first hour.

Among the initial gains were Steel common ⅜, Amalgamated ⅝, American Smelting ⅝, Erie common ¼, Erie preferred ⅝, B. & O. ¼, Reading ⅝, Lehigh Valley ⅜, Union Pacific ¼, Southern Pacific ⅛ and Southern Railway ⅛. Labor troubles around Bingham, Utah, caused some weakness in the copper group. Utah Copper declined ⅝. Westinghouse was a strong specialty, advancing ⅞.

The Curb was steady.

Americans in London were slow on professional trading.

Copper Metal Situation.

Thompson, Towle & Co. say: "The removal of production of the Nacozari mines of the Phelps-Dodge Company, with 2,000,000 pounds a month, and the Moctezuma and Greene-Cananea, with 7,000,000 pounds per month (including the Miami output), from the market, by reason of the Mexican revolution, and a strike in the Arizona camp, which threatens to interrupt copper production from Utah, is a serious matter. This production is about equal to meet present great consumptive demands, and its absence, though only temporary, must have its effect on metal prices, as the supply of spot copper in New York is already comparatively nil. One large copper interest tells us that there is only a million pounds of spot copper in New York today."

It was said in New York today that any prolongation of labor troubles may send the price of copper up to 20 cents a pound.

Financial News in Brief.

The minimum discount rate of the Bank of England remained unchanged today at 4 per cent. It is reported from Paris that the Bank of France may raise its official rate to 3½ per cent. next week. The proportion of the Bank of England's reserve to liabilities is now 50.60 per cent. against 50.30 per cent. last week.

Beef on the hoof has reached the price of $11 per hundredweight in the Chicago livestock market.

Among the eminent financiers now bound home from Europe are John D. Archbold of Standard Oil, Judge E. H. Gary of the Steel Corporation, Irving T. Bush and Henry Clay Pierce. They have sailed from Southampton for New York.

Directors of W. H. Baker & Co. today declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. It is payable October 1 on stock of record September 20. The Boston corporation manufactures confectionery.

The report of the Baltimore & Ohio & St. Paul road for the fiscal year ending with June last shows that operating revenues from all sources increased during the fiscal year by $1,853,251 to $63,122,743, while operating expenses increased by $680,437 to $47,743,185, leaving net operating revenue at $15,379,586, compared with $17,022,276 in 1911.

The present cash balance of the United States Treasury is about $86,000,000, and if Secretary MacVeagh decides to add in financing the movement of crops about $36,000,000 could be deposited with national banks. "This is tradition in Washington." It is said, "that there should always be at least $30,000,000 on hand in the Treasury." Most bankers seem to think that government aid is not needed, and they are averse to seeing the old money rate ruled. They want limited speculation until crops have been handled.

It is stated that the American Steel & Wire Co. has booked orders at the rate of 7,000 tons a day so far this month. It is expected that shipments of finished steel products by the U. S. Steel Corporation for September will total 1,300,000 tons.

J. Pierpont Morgan and Charles W. Morse will be among the first witnesses called when the Money Trust investigations is resumed by the Congressional Committee in New York about November 18.

Exports for August, 1912, exceeded those of August, 1911, by $26,000,000. The increase in imports was $29,000,000.

It is rumored in Wall Street that American Beet Sugar directors will put the common stock on a regular 7 per cent. basis when they meet during the first week in October.

If You Know Thoroughly Three Drops of Water, You Know the Ocean

If You Know Thoroughly the Lives of Three Men, You Know Humanity

All That There is in the Three Great Oceans You Can Find in Three Drops of Water. And All That There Is in the Great Human Race You Can Find in the Lives of Three Men, IF YOU KNOW ALL ABOUT THE THREE DROPS OF WATER AND ALL ABOUT THE LIVES OF THE THREE MEN.

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The education that men get after they grow up is their real education. Millions of men in this country are educating themselves reading. What they know when they die will consist of what they have learned since they stopped studying at school.

And this includes those that went to college, took the usual degrees, and imagined that they were educated, when they knew nothing.

Here is a suggestion for the man trying to educate himself, who has not had the advantage of direction by trained educators.

TO BEGIN, FIND OUT ALL ABOUT ONE IMPORTANT MAN.

Better still, find out all about THREE important men. After that, find out all you can about three important women. You can't possibly find out ALL about any important woman, for the reason that MEN have done the writing of history, and hitherto they have not thought it worth while to write much of a serious kind about the women, and, besides, they haven't thought it worth while to give the women a chance to do what they might really have done.

A man who reads for half an hour about this great man, a half an hour about that, and who at the end of the year has read about a hundred or more men imagines that he is getting an education. He is merely getting a smattering.

You ought to KNOW the man whom you study, the two or three types of great men upon whom your attention is concentrated, as the chemist knows the drop of sea water which he analyzes.

A man has said truly that if you know all about one drop of water, you know all about the ocean.

The solemn lady who sits beside you as you read this may tell you that you can't know all about the ocean unless you know all about the fishes in it and all about the pearls in the decayed oysters. But that is apart from the question.

The ocean is made of salt water. It is composed of oxygen, hydrogen and certain mineral salts. And if you know all about three drops of water from the Atlantic, the Pacific and some other ocean, you know about all the oceans of the world.

Humanity is made up of certain qualities, certain spiritual faculties, certain instincts working subject to environment.

If you know all about three typical great men, you know all about one-half of the human race. And if you know all about three great women, you know all about the other half of the human race.

Pick out with care the men and the women that you study.

Don't devote your attention to Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon—if you know all about Napoleon you know all about Alexander and Caesar. And if you know all about Caesar you know practically everything about the other two.

Those three men simply represent ambition, expressing itself in battle.

Then take some great scientist, then a great poet or musician.

If you understood thoroughly the character, the ambitions and the work of three such men as Napoleon, Darwin and Beethoven, if you studied them in every detail of their lives, private and public, and knew them thoroughly, you would know all men.

And if you then went back and studied others like them—Alexander for fighting, Aristotle for science and Phidias for art—you would find no important difference between your three great men of the old day and your three great men of today.

The important thing is to know three men absolutely, thoroughly, and three women as nearly as possibly thoroughly, THEN YOU WILL KNOW THE HUMAN RACE.

It is difficult to name the three women, for as yet women have not had a chance.

Madame Roland is worth study, but more because of the conditions under which she lived than because of her personality.

The sister of Herschel, the astronomer, exemplifying devotion to family and to truth, is worthy of study.

The famous Queen Christiana of Sweden, who encouraged philosophy, who proved marvellously the power of woman to govern and then went all to pieces suddenly, is also worth studying. Her life teaches you that women are good as long as men will let them alone.

Maria Theresa, who for so long protected her rights against the greatest soldier in Europe, is another life to study.

The life of the wonderful Olympias, mother of Alexander the Great, the lady who probably killed her husband to put her son on the throne, or to give the power and the treasure to her lover, the lady who danced dressed in nothing in particular, with snakes around her, and who gave birth to one of the most wonderful men in the world, would be worth studying.

The quiet little old Scotch woman smoking a pipe at the corner of the fire, mother of Carlyle, or the broad-hipped Corsican woman, Letisia Ramolino, who began having children when she was fourteen years old, and who gave Napoleon to Europe; the noble woman who saved this Republic and abolished slavery, BECAUSE SHE GAVE DEVOTION, EDUCATION AND GOOD PRINCIPLE TO HER STEPSON, LINCOLN—THOUSANDS OF SUCH WOMEN ARE ON THE PAGES OF HISTORY. Study three of them, know all that you can about them.

Study three men. KNOW ALL that you can about each one. Give a year to one man, rather than giving a year to three hundred men—and you will know something. YOU WILL KNOW THE HUMAN RACE.

P. S.—It might interest you and be a good thing for the boys and girls in your family circle to discuss this evening which would be the three best men and which would be the three best women to study.

If you choose, write to the editor briefly, giving your list of three men and your list of three women that best represent the human race, and that, studied thoroughly, would give to the student the most comprehensive idea of the human race. Such lists would be interesting.

The Telephone Has Helped to Build the Trusts

Men Can Be Independent, 'Free Agents' No Longer.

Third Article Written for the Boston American.

By George W. Perkins.

I RECENTLY saw a statement to the effect that there were about 14,000,000,000 telephone calls made in the United States during the past twelve months.

If that means anything it certainly means concentration—concentration of a most practical, virile, far-reaching sort.

It means that 14,000,000,000 minds were, for all practical purposes, emancipated from the bodies that they inhabited, given wings and allowed to fly through the air to some local or far distant point to hold intercourse with 14,000,000,000 other minds, return to their bodies and then perhaps the next minute go off in some other direction and do business or have social intercourse with still other minds.

The Telephone and Its Responsibility for New Problems

If we could see, with the naked eye, the minds that are nowadays flying through the air in every conceivable direction we would perhaps be better able to realize the perfectly stupendous progressive strides made within a mere handful of years in the matter of intercommunication between human beings.

The telephone, with all that it implies in the way of improved intercommunication, is far more responsible for many of the problems of the present day which require solution than any trust magnate.

Some of our Democratic friends are saying that the trusts would not be in existence were it not for the tariff.

We have had a tariff in this country for more than a century, and yet who ever heard of any trusts prior to a few years ago? No, the most important factor in bringing the "trust" into existence has been the stupendous development in means of intercommunication.

The first requisite for doing business is to be able to get at a customer. The more customers you can readily instantly get at, the more business you can do.

The Annihilation of Space Has Brought New Relations

The Twentieth Century Limited, the telegraph and the telephone have annihilated space, have wiped out State lines, commercially speaking, have brought us all together within one enclosure, so to speak, and our problem is to learn how to get along with each other in this newer, more intimate relationship.

We cannot destroy this tendency to concentration unless we destroy the instruments that have brought it about.

If we are willing to get rid of steam and electricity and go back to the ox-team method of intercommunication, we can solve our present-day problems very promptly; but if we are not willing to do this, then we must face our problems like twentieth century men, and the greatest of these problems is to learn how to minimize man's power for evil and maximize his power for good.

We have expert boards of health and quarantine commissions in our different States and take health precautions which never were taken one hundred years ago. Such boards and commissions were not necessary one hundred years ago because of our comparatively small and scattered population in those days.

Today, with our large and, in many cities, congested population, it is imperative that such precautions be taken in order to protect the entire community.

If a man has smallpox in an isolated place in the Rocky Mountains, scarcely anyone is affected except the man himself, but if he gets smallpox while in a city of three or four million people there is at once danger of contagion spreading to hundreds and thousands of people.

Everywhere we go nowadays we feel the necessity for regulation and control. A man can be one kind of a "free agent" in the Sahara Desert, but he has got to be quite a different kind of a "free agent" in the city of London. This new order of things calls for a constructive program based on an intelligent comprehension of the newer conditions under which we live and the future which we are facing.

The Republican and Democratic parties are both harping on the past and sneering at anything that resembles a constructive program dealing with the new order of things in which we find ourselves living.

The Progressive party, on the other hand, is boldly facing the present and is looking to the future. It offers a constructive program that will help solve our present problems and yet permit us to retain the telephone, the fast train and the ocean greyhound, and thus continue to lead the nations of the world.

Reply to Prof. Wilson on Tammany (Hall and Society)

P. S.—Those that have seen Professor Wilson's comment may be interested in this reply, which I have sent to various newspapers:

"September 14, 1912.

"Dear Sir—In your issue of this morning you quote Governor Wilson as saying: 'Mr. Perkins is one of these gentlemen who do not know the difference between the Tammany Society and Tammany Hall. They are absolutely distinct organizations.'

"Governor Wilson is right. I do not know the difference, because there is no material difference. I know that Mr. Gustavus Myers, in his book entitled, 'The History of Tammany Hall,' says: 'My research has shown me the absurdity of the pretence that any vital distinction exists between the Tammany Society and the Tammany Hall political organization.'

"I know that Mr. Charles F. Murphy is one of the principal officers of the Tammany Society. I know that the leaders of Tammany Hall and Tammany Society are largely the same. I know that when Governor Wilson sent his congratulatory letter to the Tammany Society on the 4th of July, 1912 (to which letter I referred yesterday), he sent it to and it was received by practically the same leaders that he refused to recognize at Syracuse day before yesterday.

"What I and other voters in New York city have a right to know from Governor Wilson is whether, in case he were elected President of the United States, he would recognize and treat with Mr. Murphy and his associates if they came to him as representing the Society of Tammany, but would refuse to have anything at all to do with them if they came to him as representing Tammany Hall? Very truly yours,
